Two Words Missing
Who Wants a League?

Next War, When?

The latest report says the Democratic slogan is to be shorter than three words, only ONE word.

At first it was to be "Peace, Progress, Prosperity."

That's a neat political bromide, not exactly a "slogan."

The single word improvement on "Peace, Progress, Prosperity," is the trick word "Coxsure." That would be a better slogan with two words put in front of it, "Don't Be Coxsure."

The New York World says "Big business for war." It intimates that big business wants war, therefore the Republican party is against the peace league.

What about the New York Evening Post, owned by Mr. Lamont, of the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Company, supporting Cox and the peace league?

It isn't natural for a J. Pierpont Morgan newspaper to support the Democratic party. But to REALLY big finance, the peace league this year is more important than party.

Big business now is WORLD business. A peace league that would make it the business of the United States to act as guarantor and collecting agent for the enterprises of big business in foreign lands, would be convenient. The New York Times also is a big business paper. It wants a peace league.

It WOULD be convenient for big business, but it won't be, for there won't be any peace league. Write that on your tablets.

Lloyd George has decided that Archbishop Mannix, from Australia, must not land in England or Ireland because of speeches made in America.

It is surprising to see the English backing away from the boasted free speech.

In ENGLAND you can say about what you please, but you must not do it in America.

As for Archbishop Mannix, he did not seem such a dangerous person, the other day, he spent half an hour in the office of this writer, studying American methods of newspaper production. He said simply that the English would have to do something about Ireland or get into serious trouble, and so they will.

Archbishop Mannix sails on the Baltic tomorrow, anyhow, perhaps to complete the record.

"England has power to keep me from landing," says he, "but not to keep me from going."

"He hath put down the mighty." Frau Meyer is spending her honeymoon at Zurich with Fritz Meyer, her husband. Fritz formerly was the chauffeur of Prince August Wilhelm, son of the ex-Kaiser, and Frau Meyer was formerly the wife of that same Prince August Wilhelm, therefore daughter-in-law of the ex-Kaiser. Stripped of power, uniform and medals, royalty loses its charms. The descendant of the ancient Hohenzollern family of many panders looks much like anybody else, even to his own chauffeur, after an unsuccessful war.

The question for Americans is this:

How soon will this nation, its young men and its money, be engaged in another big war?

Western Europe feels that it must, at any cost, hold back Russia and stop the effect of Russian bayonets, preaching of Bolshevism throughout Europe.

Russia does not mean to be stopped, declares without mincing words that destruction of "capitalism" everywhere, including the executing of as many rich men as possible, is the program mapped out.

Millions in Germany are said to feel that the way out of national bankruptcy is to join with Russia, repudiate the Versailles treaty, with its indemnity that would put a tax on German children unborn, take back the conquered iron mines and coal mines, in short, throw in Germany's lot with the new idea from Russia.

There is even suggestion of an alliance of Russia, Poland and Germany, with Turkey, Bulgaria, Austria and various dissatisfied fragments added.

It is not a pleasant situation with the constant conquering efforts of Russia proving how much power lies back of Bolshevism, and how steadily the "statesmen" of this country misjudge it.

While nations in various directions are going to pieces, enthusiastic men and women are trying to build a new nation in and around Jerusalem. It is to be a nation of and for the Jews, vast population in Palestine is chiefly Mohammedan. Jews form a small part of the population, not nearly as large as in the city of New York.

Can a nation be "built" and kept going? The thing has been tried before in South America and elsewhere. Hitherto experiments in creating nations, as in creating new languages, have failed. Languages and nations have ceased TO GROW.

Big Gallery Sees Ouimet and Guilford Battle Vardon and Ray

Ray and Vardon were made 5 to 4 favorites over Ouimet and Guilford in the before-the-match wagering today.

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Belmont Spring Country Club, July 31.—The baseball clubs have a world series once a year, and Harvard and Yale football elevens get together just as frequently, but Francis Ouimet and those two famous Englishmen, Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, match cards on the golf links only once in every seven years. They did it at this club today for the first time since 1913.

The events which transpired at the Country Club, Brookline, when these three engaged in their first meeting, is one of the sweetest bits of American golfing history, for Ouimet beat the two from England that time and thereby held the American open title on this side of the Atlantic.

No wonder a large part of the golfing public of Massachusetts took the

SWISS PROTEST LOAN TAKEN BY BOSTON FIRM

Geneva, July 30.—Swiss Socialists are loudly protesting against the new $25,000,000 government loan which is being placed in the United States at 8 per cent. interest. They claim the interest rate is exorbitant. Leo, Higginson & Co. of Boston subscribed $13,000,000 of the loan at 94 receiving the right to take over the remainder at the same price. The action of the government is suspicious," said the Berner Tagwacht, commenting on the loan.

Vatican Disapproves Action of Mannix

By International News Service.

London, July 30.—The Vatican has announced its disapproval of the Irish political utterances of Archbishop Mannix of Melbourne and "considers the archbishop's action blameworthy," said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Rome today.

Archbishop Mannix, who is now in New York city, brought down the wrath of the British government on his head by public declarations favoring the Sinn Fein movement. Despite the recent announcement by Premier Lloyd George that Archbishop Mannix would not be allowed to land in the British Isles, he is preparing to sail from New York for Queenstown on the liner Baltic tomorrow.

Everett and Somerville Men Hurt as Locomotive Boiler Explodes at Greenfield

Greenfield, July 30.—Fireman Thomas Savage of Everett is dying and Engineer John H. Stokes of East Somerville seriously injured as a result of a boiler explosion on a freight train locomotive in Montague yards early today.

The bottom literally dropped out of the boiler, according to witnesses, and the cab of the engine wrecked. Both men are at the Franklin County Public Hospital here. Savage's name is on the danger list. Stokes' recovery is by no means certain.

The train was on the way from East Deerfield to Boston and the accident delayed traffic on the Fitchburg Division for several hours.

LYNN CHARGES PUT UP TO DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Lynn's city council today voted to request an investigation by the district attorney of the charges made by Michael P. Ward, a former member, of alleged irregularities in the purchasing department. This action followed the failure of Ward to appear at a public hearing granted by the council, at which he was expected to furnish proof of his charges. Ward charged that the purchasing department violated the charter in the award of contract for an asphalt mixer. He claimed the city paid more for the mixer than it could be bought for in the open market. A man from Middleton offered $1000 more for the mixer than the city paid for it.

New York, July 30—Fears that the mysterious ship which was reported to have blown up in a sheet of smoke and flame off the New Jersey coast, south of Atlantic City, on Tuesday morning was the tank steamship Kehuku were dispelled today by a wireless message from that vessel.

The commander of the Kehuku reported to her owners, the Columbus Shipping Company, that no accident had occurred to her.

The Kehuku sailed from this port for Maracaibo, Texas, in ballast on Monday.

$1,011 TAKEN OUT IN BANK BOOK SWINDLE

An ingenius method of swindling was unearthed, according to East Boston police, when they arrested Pasqualino Cogliano of Cottage street, East Boston, on a charge of stealing $1,011 from the Sumner Savings Bank. It is alleged that Cogliano took the number of a friend's bank book and told the bank he had lost it. It was advertised according to law and then a new book was given Cogliano. The money was transferred and later withdrawn. When the real owner of the book appeared the swindle was discovered.

Heavy Casualties Reported During Fighting at Bruree in County Limerick

By International News Service.

Dublin, July 30.—Six persons have been killed in a battle between civilians and troops at Bruree, in Limerick County, according to unconfirmed reports received here today. Communication with Bruree was cut off, making it impossible to get confirmation of the reported heavy casualties.

A military force is said to have been ambushed and one soldier killed. Later reinforcements of troops arrived on the scene and a pitched battle developed.

Many persons are said to be fleeing from the villages near Bruree. The police at Mullingar, in Westmeath County, have refused to carry revolvers, according to a report from that place.

The ringleader, a policeman named Rourke, is said to have torn off his uniform when ordered to equip himself with a revolver.

250 UNION MEN QUIT WORK

Declare Cambridge Company Is Trying to Institute Individual Contract System

Although from 200 to 250 employes of the Cambridge Gas Company left their jobs today, President Albert M. Barnes said he had assurances of enough gas to last "for years" and that there was no reason for uneasiness on the part of consumers.

The walkout, by direction of the Gas House Workers' Union, came at 7:15 o'clock. The union opened strike headquarters at No. 634 Massachusetts avenue, not far from the Central square office of the company.

President Thomas J. Gilligan of the union called the demonstration 93 per cent. effective, placing the number of strikers at 250.

President Barnes estimated the number of "vacationists" at from 150 to 200, said they had left the works in a "dirty" condition, declared that fifty men remained on the job and insisted that the company will "get along."

"These men have left their jobs," Barnes said, "because I refused to reinstate a man who was discharged following conviction for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. There has been no attempt

Boosting Prices Among Dealers Will Be Stopped, Says Federal Prober

"We are after the big fellows and we are going to get them," declared Armin W. Riley of the "flying squadron" of the Department of Justice of Washington, who is in this city looking into evidence relative to profiteering in the necessaries of life.

Mr. Riley, who has been active for the past year in various sections of the country in connection with profiteering, declared after looking over the sugar situation in this city that wholesalers who "sell within the trade" for the purpose of bealing the regulation on one cent profit, will have their Federal licenses revoked and will also be prosecuted.

In speaking on the sugar situation here Mr. Riley declared that a stop is to be put to several concerns in this city who have sold sugar to other dealers charging a cent or so more on each transaction, thus apparently being within the rule.

The Federal investigator's visit here was for the purpose of having a talk with the leading sugar refiners in this city. Mr. Riley, who was in

Swindlers Counterfeit Ponzi's Certificates; His Claims of Coupon Sales Disputed

Speculators who have haunted Pi Alley for the past few days, offering to take over the Ponzi Securities Exchange certificates at sacrifice prices, were disturbed today by the report that some of these certificates have been counterfeited and that sharpers hope to unload the fake paper.

There can be no unloading of the counterfeits on Ponzi or his assistants, for the reason that no certificate is taken up and paid by the young financier until its honesty has been certified beyond question. The only person who could lose through a fraudulent certificate would be the unsuspecting outside purchaser, eager to "take a chance."

Ponzi paid out $1,450,000 to depositors in three days this week, according to his own figures. On Tuesday he paid out $750,000; Wednesday, $500,000; Thursday, $200,000, and today expected to pay less than $200,000. There were never more than twenty-five or thirty persons in line today awaiting the return of their money.

SPECULATORS WORRIED BY STORY OF FORGED PONZI NOTES

AUDITORS WORK ON BOOKS

"Finance Wizard" Claims of Coupon Profits Disputed by Postal Authorities

Earlier in the week the number mounted to 200.

Ponzi first began his American life a few years ago washing dishes in restaurants, grew to be a waiter and finally obtained a clerkship with a Boston merchandise broker, motored late today from his suburban home to his office in School street. When he arrived he found the auditor designated by District Attorney Pelletier already at work on the books of his "company." A line of about forty-five persons were waiting for their money. There appeared to be little delay in starting in to pay off.

Boston authorities were further mystified today by Ponzi's "get-rich-quick" methods, following the announcement by Postmaster Patten of the New York postoffice to the effect that the entire scheme of profiting by international reply coupons is not large enough to enable the young financier to become a multi-millionaire in a few months by juggling them.

Quickly following this sensational statement came the announcement from postoffice officials at Washington discrediting the "get-rich-quick" scheme if it is operated as he has outlined it.

These officials declare that not since the creation of the international coupon system in 1906 has the total of coupons sold in foreign countries and sent to the United States for reply postage exceeded one million dollars.

Postmaster Patten is authority for the statement that in order for Ponzi to have made the $8,000,000 he claims to have "cleaned up," 160,000,000 coupons would have been required. In New York, one of the busiest postal centres in the world, and by far the busiest in this country, not more than 27,000 coupons are kept on hand, the postmaster declared.

During the past three months, Postmaster Patten declared, only $176.50 was paid out to redeem coupons and that in this period only $360 worth of the coupons were sold at the New York postoffice.

200,000 COUPONS IN STOCK.

The New York postmaster's statement that it would have been impossible for Ponzi to have made over a few thousand, if that, by the use of international coupons, was confirmed by the Washington statement, which pointed out that there were but 200,000 coupons in stock in Washington, each having a value of six cents.

Incidentally it was announced that the most rigid investigation by postal inspectors failed to reveal at any point in the entire postal system operations of the magnitude claimed by the young Boston financial "wizard." Inspectors discredit his statement altogether, adding that if he had made the money he has it was done by some other scheme.

OFFICIALS STILL PUZZLED.

Officials, Federal, county and State, were at a loss to explain Ponzi's method of operation. The young man's cheerfulness and the readiness with which he continues to pay out thousands of dollars to his clients on a 50-per-cent-in-45-days basis further served to heighten the mystery.

Ft Alley and School street, the scene of his postoffice operations, continued to attract a fairly large but orderly crowd. Many of them were merely curious but the majority presented notes for the principal and matured interest. Those demanding the principal alone were even fewer in number than they were yesterday.

Ponzi, debonair, suave and ever eager to please, is not worried over the result of the various investigations or what the result will be when the audit of his books is over. He comments on the situation as follows:

"I was in conference with a big banker from New York and he made me this offer for my business. I have not decided as to whether to accept it or not. I am not at liberty to disclose this big fellow's identity until we have had a further conference, which has been arranged to take place here in Boston in a few days.

"I intend to resume my operations in Boston and in other cities where I have branch offices just as soon as the district attorney's auditors complete the investigations of my books; that is, of course, providing I do not accept the offer made yesterday."

Originated Ponzi Scheme, Says North End Banker

Joseph Kowal, a North End banker, claims to have originated the scheme through which Ponzi has been able to pay huge dividends and amass a fortune besides. He declares that not only is the scheme a perfectly legitimate one, but that it can be worked by any keen citizens as well as by Ponzi.

"To my mind," he said "it is honorable and it certainly presents no legal objections. It is so simple that it seems strange to me that many others have not used it. I myself had it in mind with regard to Russia before the war.

BUT ONE OPERATION.

"It consists, simply of one operation, and the only two requirements are first money, and second a European agent. All that is necessary is to convert American cash into a bank draft on a foreign city, cash the draft and purchase a money order. The draft is bought at the commercial exchange rate; the money order at the gold rate. Between these two there is always some difference and in some cases this difference amounts to many hundred per cent."

He took from his desk the circular of a New York dealer in foreign money and foreign exchange, and used the figures on this to illustrate his point.

"For example," he continued, "you can buy a thousand Austrian kronen for $8, and a Stockholm bank draft good for one thousand kronen. With these in hand your agent buys a money order exchangeable for the gold value of the thousand kronen, which is $200. Your profit is $192.

$4,370 PROFIT ON $5.50.

"Let us take Argentina. The peso is worth $8.80 a thousand at the commercial exchange rate. You make out a bank draft for $8.80 and send it to a friend in Argentina. He gets a thousand pesos for it. He buys a money order exchangeable at the gold rate. And you collect $47.50 on the money order. What could be more simple? The same process can be used even between this country and Canada."

In an effort to substantiate the theory of Mr. Kowal, a Boston American reporter visited the Boston Central Postoffice. There seemed to be a noticeable lack of information available in regard to the issuing of money orders abroad, but those at the money order division were of the opinion that foreign orders are issued at the exchange and not the gold rate.

USED POSTOFFICE LITTLE.

However, they acknowledged that the amount of American money to be given for the foreign orders is in many cases settled in a sort of money order clearing house in Paris and the details are therefore unknown to the employes in the Boston office.

Incidentally it was learned that Ponzi has transacted no business to amount to anything through the Boston Postoffice. Consequently if he used the method described by Mr. Kowal, he must have used some other channel for collection than the central postoffice.

N. Y. Man Tells How Ponzi May Get His Millions

New York, July 30—New York bankers, brokers and merchants were are well informed about foreign exchange matters are not all mystified by Charles Ponzi's "discovery" of a royal road to wealth. Ponzi, they say, doubtless has blazed the trail in somewhat similar fashion.

The key to the situation, according to E. H. Newfield of the importing and exporting firm of E. Lora Mahoupan, Inc., is the simple fact that in some countries, France, for instance, postage stamps are legal tender. Mr. Newfield in an interview illustrated the simplicity of the process and how it is that Ponzi avoids disposing of his international reply coupons in America, where they are redeemable only in limited numbers.

"For an expert in foreign exchange," Mr. Newfield said, "there is not the slightest mystery about the operation of Mr. Ponzi. In certain countries, such as France, postage stamps are legal tender. Based on this fact, the operation is as follows:

QUADRUPLES INITIAL $600.

"Take $100 in New York and cable it to a Bucharest bank. In accordance with the exchange rate between the dollar and the ley that would give the sender of $100 a credit in the Bucharest bank of 5,000 leys. Now the bank in Bucharest, or an agent of the sender, would take the 5,000 leys and purchase with them international reply coupons at the rate of about four coupons to the day and would receive, say, 20,000 coupons.

"The Bucharest bank or the agent would send those 20,000 coupons to a bank or agent in Paris, who would then present the coupons to a Paris postoffice. He would receive in exchange 20,000 postage stamps at the value of 25 centimes each, or altogether 5,000 francs in stamps. But as the stamps in France are legal tender, he may go with these 5,000 francs in stamps to a French bank and buy with them a cable transfer to the bank on New York for the equivalent at an exchange rate of 12 francs to the dollar, which amounts to, say, $400 or thereabouts.

"The exchange rates change naturally from day to day, but the above may be taken as a fair illustration. Deducting anything between 5 and 25 per cent for the handling of the transaction it is paid the foreign bankers and agents, and so forth, the New York sender would receive $400 for the original $100, and behold how $100 within a fortnight can be turned into $400 cash in New York!

FIGURES APPROXIMATE.

"The illustration is, of course, approximate. In any case the operation would have to be limited to countries which are members of the postal union, and therefore New York currency would have to be exchanged in that member country of the postal union where the exchange is most favorable to New York and the coupons would have to be cashed in countries where stamps are legal tender.

"But this will illustrate how Mr. Ponzi had no difficulty in disposing of his coupons in America—because he never sold them here! This will likewise explain why his operations are absolutely legal.

"As long as the postal union will retain its basic principle of issuing a stamp for foreign correspondence against an international coupon and as long as such stamps are currency in some countries and as long as the exchange rate between the dollar and some member country of the postal union is at such immense advantage to the dollar as it is today, not one but 5,000 Ponzis can make money."

Girl Writing Checks for Ponzi Investors

New Coupon Rates May Cut Profits

Washington, July 30.—Dealers in international postal coupons in New England may find their profits limited by an order issued by the Postmaster-General establishing new conversion rates for international money orders, as follows, to take effect August 15:

Great Britain 1 pound equals $4, Netherland 1 florin equals 38 cents, Sweden 1 kronn equals 24 cents, Denmark 1 kronn equals 20 cents, Norway 1 kronn equals 20 cents, France 1 equals 10.36 francs, Belgium and Italy the same as France.

Union Men Declare Fight Is Against the Individual Contract System

at a conference on the subject since last Tuesday."

President Gilligan, on the other hand, says that notwithstanding the company's acceptance of the "collective bargaining" principle, the men have lately been asked to enter into "individual" contracts with the company for one year. Trades unionism, insisting on collective bargaining, fights the individual contract as a matter of principle, he said.

SAYS PREFERENCE IS SHOWN.

"Last Winter, moreover," said Gilligan, "when the company laid off a number of men, we were given to understand that as soon as conditions warranted it these men would be taken back. Instead, the company has taken every possible occasion to show a preference for non-union labor."

A minor cause for complaint, Gilligan admitted, was the recent discharge of one William J. Dowling for what the union leaders deemed "insufficient" reason.

Because, he says, the trouble involves a public service corporation and the rights of the public, Mayor Quinn is desirous of bringing about an amicable adjustment of the differences between the gas company and employes.

MAYOR TRIES TO ADJUST.

The Mayor made an eleventh-hour effort yesterday to bring the parties together. He was unsuccessful, but he said today that he is by no means ready to give up.

"It stands to reason," said the Mayor, "that if anything like the present situation is to continue the public interest will suffer. Strikes are bad for Cambridge and bad for business. There must be some way to settle this one before it has gone about long and worked real harm. I am at the service of both parties in the interest of the public."

Slacker Allinson Is Let Out of Jail

Leavenworth, Kas., July 30—Brent Dew Allinson, of Chicago, has been released from the federal penitentiary, where he was serving a term as a war slacker. He failed to report when drafted.

He was released by special order of the war department, although his five-year term had not expired. When court-martialed he was sentenced to 25 years, but this was cut down by the reviewing authorities.

Prison attaches said today that Allinson had more outside "pull" than any man who was ever confined behind the walls. They also say that he broke more prison rules than any of the other inmates.

During the early part of the war Allinson engaged in social settlement work in Chicago. He obtained an appointment from the state department as a consular clerk. In the meanwhile, he wrote to Secretary Baker condemning this nation's participation in the war.

ASK WILSON AID IN COAL CRISIS

Head of National Association Appeals to White House for Immediate Action

By International News Service.

Washington, July 30.—Declaring that Federal action is necessary to meet the coal crisis, J. D. A. Morrow of the National Coal Association today called at the White House to urge that President Wilson take some immediate action.

Morrow, who represents a large majority of the coal operators, said that there was a slight chance of operators and miners being able to settle labor differences and that the President alone was in a position to act.

He stated that the reconvening of the coal wage adjustment commission would be satisfactory to both sides, and that this commission could undoubtedly adjust present labor troubles.

Northwest to Get 4,000 Cars of Coal Every Day

Washington, July 30.—Detailed instructions were today issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission to E. M. Herr, Cleveland, O., special agent for the commission in the movement of coal under priority orders in the Northwest.

The orders call for the movement of coal to the Northwest at the rate of 4,000 cars a day for fifty days, each car carrying fifty tons.

Coal Union Officials Get Blanket Authority

Indianapolis, July 30.—Executive officers of the United Mine Workers have been clothed with "blanket authority to take any action necessary to protect the interests of the miners in the mine strike crisis, it was announced today by John L. Lewis, international president of the union.

Coal operators, meeting at Chicago to discuss ways and means for ending the "unofficial" strike of miners, which has partly paralyzed industries throughout the Central West, declared today that only President Wilson could bring relief to the coalless Middlewest.

The operators is whether they will meet the miners' representatives in a general wage conference as suggested by Lewis. There is a division of opinion paralleling the division of labor in this.

The Indiana operators have definitely declared against such a plan without White House sanction. "There is nothing we can do," said Phil H. Penna, head of the Indiana operators. "If we meet the miners we lay ourselves open to the charge of collusion. The wage question can only be opened with the permission of the government. President Wilson is the only one who can act."

The steel mills at Gary and Indiana Harbor are beginning to feel the pinch of coal shortage, and in Chicago many industries have been forced to curtail operations and shut down completely. Railroads have seized coal in transit.

It is virtually impossible to obtain coal now for manufacturing purposes. Reports from Illinois indicate that mine operations have not been completely stopped there is at least a 50 per cent reduction in output. Mining in Illinois is practically at a standstill.

The Interstate Commerce Commission issued orders to J. W. Howe, of the Tidewater Coal Exchange and H. M. Graham, of the Lambert Point Coal Exchange, Norfolk, that the 1,250,000 tons of coal for New England under priority should be moved over the Baltimore & Ohio, Cumberland & Pennsylvania, Cheapeake & Ohio, Eastern Maryland, Pennsylvania, Monongahela, New York Central, Virginia and Norfolk & Western Maryland railroads.

It was ordered that this coal be moved through New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Hampton Roads, the bulk being sent through New York.

In making this order the commission informed Daniel Willard, of the Railway Executives' Association, and D. B. Wentz, of the Bituminous Coal Shippers' Association, that the order was issued to insure that cars on these lines would be maintained for the movement of coal to New England.

Following his talk with the refiners Mr. Riley went to New Hampshire where he intends to look into the sugar situation and alleged profiteering in the Granite State.

CLOTHING SHOULD DROP.

When asked about the high cost of clothing Mr. Riley said, "Clothing ought to be considerably cheaper this Fall. In fact I look for a $20 limit on men's ready-made suits. The people have got tired of getting 'stung' and they have simply refused to buy. I learned from a confidential source that manufacturers are already preparing to trade, although they are handing out the 'bunk' that you had better buy now. That kind of stuff is pure nonsense, in my opinion."

The "flying squadron" head upon reading evidence against one of the meat concerns in this city on alleged profiteering, which is in possession of the local Department of Justice, stated that "the chances for final convictions for alleged profiteering in the necessaries of life are more favorable in this city than elsewhere in the country."

WOMEN PLAN "VOTE STRIKE" IF RATIFICATION IS DELAYED

MILITANTS WILL FORM NEW PARTY

Mrs. Belmont Heads Movement for a "Manless" Political Organization

By International News Service.

New York, July 30.—A women's political party will be launched as soon as the campaign for the ratification of the suffrage amendment is ended, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, society woman and militant suffrage leader, announced here today.

Plans for calling a convention to organize it are now under way. If there is not sufficient time to get into action for the November election, a woman's strike against voting will be urged.

The new feminist party will enter the political field with its own candidates. No man will have a voice in it, no "boss" will dictate its policies, said Mrs. Belmont.

NEW POLITICAL PROGRAM.

The purpose of forming a separate party for women, she said, is "to put before the voters a new political program with the broad needs and serious point of view of women."

No money will be lacking to carry on its aims, according to Mrs. Belmont, who is one of the wealthiest women in America and has been one of the largest contributors to the suffrage cause. She said many of the women of independent fortune who had financially supported the fight for suffrage would contribute generously to the new party.

"There is a nationwide demand among the women for a party of their own, she declared. Its recent spread to the women voters to stay out of the old parties and refrain from voting until they are "freed from man domination in politics," has brought hundreds of letters pledging support to her movement.

"Any logical woman knows that if she joins a man's party she becomes nothing but a subordinate," said Mrs. Belmont. "She is never placed in positions of intelligence. Her political power is used, but she has no voice.

NO DANGER OF "SEX WAR."

"There need be no fear the new party will precipitate a sex war. It will not oppose man's interest. On the contrary, its program will aid and put to the best type of men as well as to the best type of women.

"There is no sex antagonism between broad-minded men and women, but it is fact men and women cannot work together in the same organization. This is because it is males instinct to dominate.

"Women of dignity and self-respect will not tolerate this in organizations in which men and women work together the men play the game of arousing jealousy among the women.

"Then, too, today, after the world centuries god have made a mess of it. It is now time for the feminine, conservative element of the race, to take a hand. In this country we have now only the lowest type of political leadership by men."

Though the male voice will be barred from its councils men may sometimes be nominated for office by the new party, Mrs. Belmont said.

"There may be offices which women are not suited to fill as a result of lack of experience, I might add, however, that I could name any number of women more fit to be President of the United States than either the present Democratic or Republican candidates."

U. S. AWAITS OIL PACT FACTS BEFORE DEFENDS ROME'S TRIP ABROAD

Ambassador Davis Expected to Present Protest on Anglo-French Plans

Judge Cohen at Court-Martial Says Accused Didn't Intend to Evade Draft

By International News Service.

Washington, July 30.—The State Department today awaited details from the American Embassy at London respecting the urgent representations made to Great Britain on behalf of this government regarding the new Anglo-French oil agreement.

Officials expected Ambassador Davis promptly to present to the British Foreign Office the views of this government and to obtain additional information. Considerable doubt existed as to the nature of the new move by Great Britain and France to monopolize the output of oil in so-called "mandate territories."

To learn if it is England's purpose to choke off all attempts by the nationals of other countries to develop oil properties in other lands, Ambassador Davis has been directed to obtain full information.

The "open door" principle with regard to the development of oil properties in mandate territories covered by the Anglo-French agreement is believed to have been brought seriously into question by the State Department, it was officially declared will pursue a vigorous course to safeguard American citizens and to uphold a principle which is believed to be of the highest importance to American interests.

Until more specific data is at hand respecting England's new move, officials were inclined to remain silent.

Claims of similarity between the Bergdoll cases and that of Philip A. Rome of Worcester, charged with evading the draft, were denied by Judge A. K. Cohen, counsel for the defendant, during the hearing of arguments before a military tribunal in the Federal Building today.

Judge Cohen told the members of the court martial that the case of his client was entirely different from the Bergdolls, inasmuch as while Rome was charged with desertion, he left the country before the draft was established.

Judge Cohen denied that the accused had any intention of remaining away from the country permanently when he sailed for Buenos Ayres early in July of 1917.

The defendant, Judge Cohen said, went to South America as a representative of his father-in-law, Rome & Sons, who had been engaged in an export business in those countries for over a year at that time. Young Rome, his counsel said, had begun negotiations for passage as early as the middle of February, 1917, and was assembling samples.

Philip Rome began his preparations to leave before this country's declaration of war, secured his passport later and left a postoffice address in accordance with government restrictions, Cohen said, but he had no intention of evadin gthe draft, Judge Cohen said. He also purchased a round trip ticket, according to the judge.

Women Advised How to Register to Vote

Mrs. True Worthy White, of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, is writing for the Boston American a series of articles telling how to become registered for full suffrage in the Fall.

Because it seems quite probable that a thirty-sixth State will ratify the amendment, and because women, through inexperience, may be denied presidential suffrage, by neglecting to register or through the failing to understand the various steps leading to registration. Mrs. White will explain all the details. The tenth article follows:

The new woman voter needs to realize that the ballot is a power in her hands, and through the use of this power, conditions may be changed as peacefully and as soon as the majority of people wish to have them changed. "Revolutionize through the ballot box," says Abraham Lincoln.

But to go on. In 1913, an act was passed by the General Court, authorizing towns and cities of Massachusetts to adopt the primary system of nominating candidates for town, city, State and Federal offices. This method was to take place when the voters had so voted at the party caucus.

At the primary elections the choice of the voters is between two or more Republicans or Democrats for the nomination. Before the primary, candidates take out their nomination papers. For a State office 1,000 signatures are necessary. Of these, not more than 25 may be secured in one county. Suppose that three Republicans take out papers offering themselves as candidates for nomination to the same office. The contest is then within the party, and each candidate conducts a campaign to convince Republican voters that he is best fitted for the office and the most likely candidate to win the election for the party. It is during this campaign that the voters have a real opportunity to do some thinking and to make their influence felt with the candidates. The best man should win. This campaign before the primaries is educational in value, and usually covers a period of about six weeks.

CALL TRANSFER 'TOMFOOLERY'

Rutland Tuberculous Veterans in Letter Say Change Would Be Catastrophe

Characterizing the proposed transfer of tuberculous veterans from Rutland to various army hospitals as "tomfoolery" and "Washington swivel chair strategy," thirteen of the men affected vigorously protested against the proposed action in a letter to the Associated Press bureau here today. The transfer would amount to a "catastrophe for many men and a treatment," believe

Summit House, Rutland,
July 29, 1920.

Editor Boston American:

Would it be assuming too much liberty for some patients in this sanitarium, in the most courteous manner possible, to request you to publish the very respectful but most emphatic protest against the proposed transfer of tuberculous veterans from Rutland to various army hospitals in this country.

There is no doubt but that the officials responsible for this piece of attempted bungling do not have any idea of what this proposed change means. It would be far worse than anything that could happen to these men suffering from tuberculosis, it amounts to a catastrophe for many men already under treatment. Even the forcasting of these wholesale transfers at this moment is causing those affected men now in bed, not to mention those in a convalescent state, about to once again get down their feet.

Every man to the very last will refuse army hospital treatment preferring to go to his respective home to take treatment. The results of this action are obvious—less chance for recovery and more opportunity for a great deal longer period. Where is this decision, this tomfoolery? Undoubtedly, more of the swivel chair strategy from Washington.

We realize that this protest is rather weak, being hurriedly prepared. Nevertheless, the protest is solemn, yer vigorous to the last word, and we call upon the various Legion posts, the State authorities of the Legion, parents, friends and relatives of tubercular veterans and all decent thinking people to rally to this protest with a meaning.

Transportation is on the way for the 79 vets at Rutland, so there is not a second to lose.

AUTO THEFT RING HEARING SET

Cambridge Court to Determine Action Against Police and Others Involved

A hearing before Judge Charles Aiken in the Third District Court, East Cambridge, will be held next Monday at 9:15 a. m. to determine what action shall be taken against Cambridge policemen and business men involved in automobile thefts.

This decision was reached today following conferences of Chief of Police John J. McBride, Chief Police Inspector Patrick Harley, Judge Aiken and attaches of the district attorney's office. It is not known whether the hearing will be public or private.

Police reports that recent crusades had shattered the ring are not supported by the facts and developments, it was learned today. While it is true that the operations of the gentry have been curtailed during agitation, it is also true that the jailing of Barney Paeff, Buckley and other members of the gang and the wholesale indicting of more, has ended the evil by any means.

THIEVES CAUTIOUS.

Auto thieves may have scurried to cover and suddenly become more cautious nerasbouts as a class, owing to aroused public sentiment, but they have not been routed. Their cars are surprisingly large and they are still stealing cars. And with the first evidence of faltering on the part of the authorities they are ready to pounce on more.

Evidence in the possession of lawyers and officials shows that the ring has operated in Boston and Cambridge is linked up in five counties and there is absolute proof of organization.

One of the outstanding features of the vigorous probe being conducted by District Attorney S. Howard Dunbar in Essex County was the immediate discovery that the same men implicated in auto thefts there were implicated in Middlesex and Suffolk counties—Paeff, Barney and many others.

Another interesting sidelight that cropped out today was the fact that Albert Paeff, master operator, now an inmate of State's Prison took a fancy to an automobile in his neighborhood, had it registered and then directed it to be stolen a week later. This is said to show the methods and daring of the gang. They have duped many unsuspecting citizens and then again—and this is said in a stage whisper—some of the prominent citizens, among them public officials, have bought cars knowing them to have been stolen, and there is proof of it.

Since the announcement made two days ago by the district attorney's office that the Cambridge police department had asked that complaints against certain members of the force and four business men be sifted and that evidence bearing on the charges had been submitted to Chief of Police McBride, the citizens have been inundated with inquiries as to what had been officially reported that warrants would be applied for and a crop of arrests made at once. But there was departmental friction and a hitch behind the political scenes which delayed matters.

Indications today were that Chief McBride would not confer with the police of the Third District Court before Monday, and that is the day that the special grand jury will convene to take up other auto cases on the docket. It is known that, instead of accepting at its face value the documentary evidence submitted by the district attorney's office, the police department is carefully checking up on every detail, even to the extent of sending inspectors to interview witnesses.

SAYS CASE NOT DROPPED.

Chief John J. McBride said today:

"The case hasn't been dropped by any means. It involves serious charges and therefore we decided to proceed with caution. We are still analyzing the evidence and will be advised by Assistant District Attorney Harrington when to submit our decision. I shall decide what should be the next step. If District Attorney Dunbar thinks that the lower court is the proper course I suppose we shall have to take that step, although I see no advantage in that. It would be better to go direct to the grand jury, seeing as I understand he has a special session within a few days."

Mayor Edward W. Quinn said today:

"It is a pity our city has had to be subjected to so much unsavory notoriety. The sooner it is ended the better. Apparently there is no ground for suspicion so far as a few members of the police force and certain citizens are concerned. I wish to state with all possible emphasis that if there is evidence of misconduct offenders should be dropped."

DEFENDS POLICEMEN.

"As matters stand, in the present confused state, the entire police department has to take the odium and the blame for the city. The fact is that the Cambridge police department did more a year ago to break up the auto theft ring than the entire police department of any other city. The outside public forgets this. Captain Chaney personally cleaned out a vicious retreat of auto thieves in the Hilltop woods, where he found a large number of plates from stolen automobiles buried, and he made arrests.

"Matters have reached such a stage that something ought to be done to clear the air. Personally I don't thing the present scandal so called, is as serious as some suppose, but while there is the least tinge of suspicion we are going to keep our city in the limelight. People overlook the fact that otherwise we have a model city. There are no gambling resorts or places of ill-repute in Cambridge, and the rank and file of policemen and their chiefs do deserve the respect of the community. If there is anything wrong let us root it out now and for all time."

Spanish War 'Angel Nurse' Is Dead

DR. LAURA A. C. HUGHES.

Dr. Laura A. C. Hughes, prominent woman physician of Huntington avenue, died today at the Good Samaritan Hospital on Binney street, Roxbury, from cancer. She had been ill for some time and had been at the hospital two weeks.

Dr. Hughes was instrumental in the movement to secure legal registration for nurses, and in the time of the Spanish War was called the "Angel of Montauk Point," by the soldiers to whom she ministered as a trained nurse. It was due to Dr. Hughes' efforts that Boston City Hospital rules were established at Montauk Point.

In 1914, after the Salem fire she was placed in charge of a baby camp there. Dr. Hughes also selected a number of nurses for Red Cross work in the World War and they passed all examinations.

For some years she had been a physician in the Boston schools and was appointed medical inspector in charge of nurses in the child division of the Health Department.

Original Woman of Impulse Is 'Broke'

New York, July 30.—In her youth Mrs. Marian Gilhooley-Lawrie-White-Curry was a creature of impulse. From the earliest times that she can remember, when her silken hair was in a curl, she regarded herself as a plaything of Fate. She is now thirty-two and the years have not subdued the psychological traits that won for her the sobriquet of "The original woman of impulse."

Yesterday she admitted in the Supreme Court, in the role of debtor for $1,500 borrowed money, that she was penniless. She hastened to add: "But I will be in very comfortable circumstances again soon. I went into this deal on an impulse and I know I am going to be successful."

"The "deal," she explained, is a business venture in something called "impulse" and consented to an adjournment of her examination to August 12. Here are some of the "impulses" in Mrs. Curry's eventful career:

Impulse No. 1—In 1906 she eloped with Frank Ellis Lawrie, private secretary to John W. Gates. She openly admitted it was an impulse and succeeded in keeping the ceremony secret from her father, Judge Patrick H. Gilhooley of Elizabeth, N. J. But she lost her purse in a street car and in it was the marriage certificate and the fact of the marriage soon became public.

Impulse No. 2—Mrs. Lawrie she disappeared "on an impulse." After two weeks she obtained parental forgiveness and left for Europe. A divorce was obtained and she said frankly that the divorce, like the marriage, was started on an impulse.

Impulse No. 3—When Mrs. Lawrie met Walter J. White of Cleveland on one of her many impulsive trips abroad, the impulse seized her again and she entered her second marriage. Mr. White was a millionaire and dare-devil driver of automobiles which he and his father manufactured, did not agree with Mrs. White's ways and a separation followed.

Impulse No. 4—On her separation from White, another impulse compelled Mrs. Lawrie-White to wed again. Mrs. Curry studied music abroad and announced her "impulse" to gain fame on the concert stage. Too many "impulses" she said, to have caused Mr. Curry, the third husband, to seek refuge in China.

Impulse No. 5—Most recent in her acts was to adopt the professional stowaway, Mike Gilhooley, fifteen years old. Mike, a cousin of Belgian-Irish parentage, had made five attempts to see the world by secreting himself in ships. He had been deported four times and on the fifth attempt the impulse Mrs. Curry came to his rescue. She said no one by the name of Gilhooley would be kept out of America if she could prevent it. She took Mike straight away to the Hotel Vanderbilt where Mike learned what a finger bowl looked like. He is now at the country place of Mrs. Curry's father in Milford, Del.

Mrs. Curry is now residing at No. 3 West 54th street. She admitted testified yesterday she would pay every dollar soon. As for her ward she declared his future was provided for.

SCORES WOMEN POKER PLAYERS

Judge Denounces Spending of Husbands' Cash at Gaming Table

New York, July 30.—Women poker players, who spend "all their husbands' hard-earned money over a gaming table," came in for a scathing rebuke from Magistrate Barlow Tobias, when Mrs. Florence Schlesinger came before him.

Detectives testified that they found a dozen women in her apartment trying to hide one another before they held nothing less than "fours."

Chips sold at $20 a stack, the officers said, a stack containing $18 worth of the disks and Mrs. Schlesinger dragging down $2 on each sale for the "kitty." The "kitty" bought the "eats."

Mrs. Schlesinger was held in $500 bail for trial.

"I have no objection," the magistrate said, "to the social features of card games. It's a nice way to pass an afternoon—in a friendly game. But it appears that this was a business proposition, that an income was derived from this game. This sort of thing works a hardship on the husband. Because a wife is foolish and throws his money away he gets discouraged and downhearted and loses interest in life."

POLISH CRISIS BEFORE LEAGUE

Council, Meeting in Spain, Takes Up Plea of Warsaw, for Aid

London, July 30.—The Polish armistice envoys will cross the Russo-Polish lines at 6 o'clock this evening, the British government announced at noon. Official dispatches state that the Bolsheviki, offensive "is raging with heightened fury."

By International News Service.

San Sebastian, Spain, July 30.—Poland's plea for help to save the country from complete annihilation by the powerful arms of Soviet Russia was the first question before the council of the League of Nations when it met here today. This was the eighth meeting of the council.

Great Britain is represented by A. J. Balfour, former British foreign secretary; Italy by Tomasso Tittoni, former Italian premier; France by Leon Bourgeois, and Spain by Count Quinones de Leon. The United States is not participating in the meeting.

Poland's plea to the allies for help was not upon the original program of the meeting was arranged, but in view of the critical situation in Eastern Europe it was decided to take up the Polish crisis and discuss it first. Besides Poland the council will take up the following matters:

1—German reparations and the omission of an inter-allied loan to assist in the delivery of German coal.

2—Measures of blockade to be put in effect against any offending member of the League of Nations.

3—Future activities of an International Hygienic Association.

4—The future of German colonies under mandatory rule.

5—Relations between the council and the assembly of the League of Nations.

6—India's request for membership in the International Labor Bureau.

7—Plans and the date for the proposed financial conference at Brussels.

KERENSKY PLEA FOR RUSSIA

Begs Allies to End Blockade and Ridicules Fears of "Red Bonaparte"

By International News Service.

Paris, July 30.—Alexander F. Kerensky, Socialist Premier of Russia from July to November in 1917, but who was deposed by the Bolshevikl regime of Lenine and Trotsky, today issued an appeal to the world in behalf of Russia. M. Kerensky asks that the blockade barriers surrounding Russia be broken down.

He ridicules the fears expressed in England and France that a "Red Bonaparte" will arise in Russia who will sweep all Europe with his armies.

"Russia will become the great peaceful democracy of Europe," is the prediction made by the former Russian premier.

Without explaining in detail how it will come about, M. Kerensky forecasts that the Bolshevik menace will pass. He declares, however, that the allies, after making war on the Russians for upwards of two years, "will not find them lonely."

ERRORS OF ALLIES.

"The allies are now reaping the fares that they sowed," said the former premier. "To the real friends of democratic Russia there is no difference whether the Bolsheviki accept the offer of a general peace conference in London or not.

"The allies have stumbled from one error to another, but singularly to say they will persist in the belief that their course is the correct one.

"In battling Bolshevism with armed forces on Russian soil the allies have not only offended Russian national sentiment, but have created a powerful enemy. This feeling of enmity is now controlled by the Bolsheviki.

"The allies find themselves face to face with a giant of their own creation and they do not know what to do.

RUSSIANS NOT "TENDER."

"It is a little late for the allies to advise moderation and unselfishness on the part of the Russian Bolsheviki after the allies have waged war on them unceasingly. I do not believe that the allies will find the Russians tender.

"I believe that Poland should remain free within her ethnographic limits, but that she should make peace with free Russia.

"The fear of a Red Bonaparte, exploited in England and France, is a ridiculous phantasm. The Russian peasant abhors military rule. He only wishes to resume his normal life of peace that was interrupted by the allied blockade and the allied attacks.

"It is time now to break down the barriers surrounding Russia. When that is done the Russian people will themselves settle their own liberty.

"Russia will become the great, peaceful democracy of Europe."

SEEK LE ROY AS SLAYER OF TWO

Evidence Implicates Him in Unsolved Death of Man in New York Hotel

New York, July 30.—Newest developments in the trunk murder mystery, the tentacles of which extend from New York to Mexico by way of Detroit, Chicago and several little Mississippi towns, came today in the simultaneous announcement from Washington that negotiations had been opened with the Mexican government to effect the arrest of Eugene Le Roy, alias O. J. Fernandez.

ANOTHER CRIME HINTED.

It was also stated by the New York authorities that they believe Le Roy may be the mysterious "P. P. Pourveyer," who murdered Cecil E. Langden of Portland, Ore., here last August.

Langden was found murdered in a room in the McAlpin Hotel, his skull fractured by a blow from a heavy silver candlestick. His roommate, according to the hotel register, had been a man named Pourveyer. This man had disappeared with about $200 in cash his victim was known to have had. No trace of him was ever found.

HANDWRITING ALIKE.

The police compared samples of Leroy's handwriting with the signature on the hotel register, and they say marked similarity exists between the two. They believe Langden was killed by a degenerate, and evidence in the LeRoy case has convinced them that here again they are dealing with a degenerate.

In addition to the name Fernandez, Le Roy is said to have used the alias O. J. Wood. Records of the New York police show that a man named Oscar J. Wood was arrested July 4, 1919, charged with the theft of $600 in Liberty Bonds and jewelry. He was indicted, tried, found guilty and was placed on suspended sentence.

Police of every city and town in this State have been enlisted in the search for the boy, who is more than six feet tall, cards containing the boy's picture have been sent to every police station, army and navy recruiting station.

No trace of the bicycle upon which he was riding when he left home has been found, and the fact has strengthened Mr. Morley's belief that his son is alive.

A fainting spell, brought on by extreme anger, caused a woman, who later gave her name as Miss Ethel M. "He made a statement that made me so mad that I fainted as I tried to leave the car," she explained, referring to the driver, Walter G. Langell of No. 9 Union street, Franklin. Neither was held.

U. S. PROTESTS JAP INVASION

Occupation of Siberia by Mikado's Troops Arouse "Inquiries" at Washington

Washington, July 30.—The United States in effect has protested against Japan's unchecked exploitations in Siberia. "Inquiries" have been sent to Tokyo. It was announced at the State Department today.

Until it is otherwise shown, this government is forced to believe that Japan purposes to occupy the northern half of Sagkalien Island and set up a so-called buffer State in Eastern Siberia. This would give the Mikado's government control there for all time with Japanese domination of the Eastern Railway. The intention of Japan to take the northern half of Sagkalien already has been announced by the general in charge there, and this government has reason to believe that the buffer State already has been delimited without the consent of any other nation.

The Japanese ambassador was at the State Department on Tuesday and the British ambassador was there later. It is said that the British ambassador disagrees with the Japanese policy so far as her control of the Chinese Eastern Railway is concerned. Great Britain understands that the road has been internationalized.

Aside from this practically unimportant phase of the question, the United States appears to have been left in the position of having to fight it out with Japan diplomatically for the main question of the enormous absorption of Siberian territory. Japan some weeks ago set up the naive justification for these seizures that she had to play a lone hand in Siberia to "resist the Soviets."

His body was discovered by a younger brother in the cellar of their home, No. 119 Garden City.

Osinsky returned from work and ate a hearty meal with his parents. He was chatty and smiling, and after eating, hoed potatoes in the garden. He told his mother he would chop some wood in the cellar.

She heard her son whistling, and thought he was piling up the wood. Instead he was arranging his noose. No cause for the suicide was known.

SHOE MEN FILE NEW WAGE LIST

Increases as High as $18 Are Asked by Haverhill Union; Makers Protest

Haverhill, July 30.—Following a general closing of shoe factories by manufacturers, the Shoe Workers' Protective Union has now presented a price list to fifteen sole, counter and top-lift manufacturers demanding weekly increases as high as $18. These prices, the manufacturers assert, are prohibitive.

Prices asked in the new lists submitted to the cut sole concerns go into effect July 31. Comparisons with what the same workers are getting under the old price lists from September 25, 1919, to the present time, follow:

Sole cutters $54 a week, present pay $37 a week; sole choppers $55 a week, $38 present pay a week; sole strippers $50 a week, $32 present pay a week; sole graders $46 a week, $28 present pay a week; sole setters $46 a week, $26 present pay a week.

The sole packers also want $21 a week, having under last year's price received approximately $13.50 weekly. The welghers seek $41 weekly, the old scale ranging from about $18 to approximately $29 a week. The union members through their agents also ask that extra work be rewarded with extra pay and that no work be done on Saturdays and holidays. Union agents are also to be allowed in the factories during working hours if time slips are accepted. The working period is to be five days of nine hours each.

Manufacturers assert that they have to compete with similar concerns out of town where five and a half days constitute a working week and there are other handicaps difficult to overcome. Thousands of dollars more are to be paid out to the workers.

GIRL, 17, MAY BE RIVER VICTIM

Disappeared From Fairhaven Hospital and Failed to Return for Baby

Fairhaven, July 30.—Coupled with the finding of a woman's leg in the Acushnet River, the police are probing the alleged disappearance of a seventeen-year-old girl from the Fairhaven Hospital last Monday, where she gave birth to a baby girl two and one-half weeks ago.

The hospital is run by Dr. J. N. Tessier of New Bedford. Efforts of newspaper men to get in touch with him proved futile. At the hospital it was ascertained that the baby is still there awaiting its mother.

When the girl called at the hospital she gave her name as Yvonne Brousseau. She said she lived in Fall River. She first called at Dr. Tessier's home, No. 645 Purchase street, New Bedford. The girl had money, it is said, and she was taken to the hospital. Entering the hospital she gave Dr. Tessier $5.00, is stated.

"That is for my good will," she is reported to have said.

During her stay at the hospital the young woman telephoned a legal firm and held a brief conversation.

It shall have an assistant interviewing a certain professional medical surgeon regarding his knowledge of the woman's leg that was found in the Acushnet River," said District Attorney Kerney.

"If the investigation being made by me discloses any tangible evidence, I shall take action. I have been in touch with Assistant Medical Examiner O'Brien about the case. I expect a report from Sheriff Francis today regarding the contents of the box from which the leg was found protruding in the water, "I am also inquiring into the disappearance of a seventeen year-old girl from the Fairhaven Hospital."

DECLARES CRIME HURTS IRELAND

Secretary Greenwood Says Britain Will Never Tolerate Coercion in Green Isle

London, July 30.—"The British government is prepared to give Ireland self government but will not permit the island to become an independent republic."

Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, thus restated the attitude of the cabinet toward Ireland when asked if the attempt of the Labor Party to effect a permanent settlement had modified the intentions of the government.

WILL NOT TOLERATE COERCION.

"Does that mean," he was asked, "that the government is sympathetic toward dominion home rule as suggested by Sir Horace Plunkett and supported by a large body of moderate men in England, Ireland and other parts of the empire?"

The statement means just what it says, Sir Hamar replied. "We are prepared to meet the representatives of any body of Irish opinion and discuss with them the ways and means to restore peaceful conditions. We have frequently stated that we would welcome suggestions which will improve the bill now before the Commons.

"However, we will not stand for the coercion of any part of Ireland by any other part. Above all, we will not tolerate the murder and intimidation which is now pushing Ireland headlong toward economic and political chaos.

"The government is firm in this position. It is taking and will continue to take all steps necessary to prevent murder and arson and preserve life and property.

TERRORISM AN OBSTACLE.

"The greatest obstacle to a real settlement of the difficulties is the wave of terrorism which has included the ruthless murders of policemen, soldiers and sailors which is now horrifying England, arousing the deep indignation of the whole world. I am convinced that this work is that of a clique of terrorists comparatively few in number."

"Does that mean declaration of martial law throughout Ireland if the present reign of terror continues?" was queried.

"Every necessary step will be taken to preserve life," he replied. "Ireland is part of the empire and must remain so."

Sir Hamar refused to discuss the speech by President De Valera of the Irish Republic, made in New York, in which he indicated a willingness to negotiate along certain lines. Sir Hamar said, however, that if any one representative of Irish opinion wished to approach the government with suggestions they should come forward and would be received.

He was asked what the government's position was with reference to opinion abroad that it had weakened on its original program.

"Our bill before the House is the answer. The Sinn Fein says it will not have it. The Irish question can never be settled from this non possumus attitude. There are seventy Sinn Fein members of Parliament. It is their duty to take their places in the Commons and make practicable contributions in the constitutional manner looking toward a settlement of the problems."

He refused to comment on the utterances of Archbishop Mannix, the Australian churchman, in the United States, but declared that in accordance with the pronouncement of the Premier, he would not be permitted to land on Irish soil.

PUPILS' GARDENS IN ARLINGTON A SUCCESS

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail. —Advertisement.

To Keep Skin Fresh and Fine These Heated Days

It would be much better for the skin if little cream, powder or rouge were used during the heated term. Mixed with perspiration, dust and grime, these things are anything but beautifying. Ordinary cucumber was wholesome for the complexion, and without giving an oily shine, spoiled no pastry. Its practice is the ideal application for the season, as it not only keeps the pores clean, but daily requires particles of scarf skin which have been soiled by dirt or weather. By constantly keeping the complexion clear, white, satiny, it does more toward perpetuating a youthful countenance than any of the rare or sacrifice commonly employed. One ounce of unrolled wax, obtainable at any druggists, will completely renovate the worst complexion. It is spoiled at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning. There's nothing better for tanned, freckled or reddened skins.—Advertisement.

RUSH WORK ON NEW R. R. RATES

Interstate Commerce Board Members Prepare Schedule Increase for Sept. 1

By International News Service.

Washington, July 30.—Members of the Interstate Commerce Commission are in daily conference perfecting the increased freight and passenger rate orders to cover "adequate earnings" and increased labor charges of the railroads that schedules of traffic charges may be complete by September 1.

It is expected the commission will announce its rate decision Saturday or early next week to give the roads at least one month to get their rate charges into the hands of the agents when the government divorces itself from any part in the operation of the roads on September 1.

Until the beginning of September, the roads are guaranteed the same rental they received during government control. On that date the roads must begin to "earn for themselves" under the Esch-Cummins transportation act. The act provides, however, that the Interstate Commerce Commission must adjust rates that the roads may derive 6 per cent. on their actual investment.

To do this the roads claim they need increases amounting to about 25 per cent. on freight and 20 per cent. on passenger rates. It is believed, however, that the commission will strike a 22 1-3 per cent. average for freight and not more than ½ per cent. per mile for passenger fares.

In addition to the straight increase there may be other increases in the form of surcharges for Pullman car transportation and additional excess baggage tariffs requested by the roads. According to estimates made by former Director-General Hines of the Railroad Administration the increased freight rates fall back on the people fivefold in the multiplication of profits on goods carried by the roads. If this were so the cost to the public would be more than $8,000,000,000 a year if the full amount requested by the roads is granted.

FINAL CLEAN-UP SALE

Of all our choice, known-quality suits at way under the cost to produce and way under the price for Spring, 1921

We want to dispose of every suit in the store in the shortest possible time, but we realize that only the most drastic price reductions will move a stock of this size within the few remaining weeks of the season.

For here's the largest stock we ever owned at this time of the year, the greater part of it consisting of the finest suits produced by The House of Kuppenheimer.

It comprises the season's choicest fabrics from the most famous mills, and there are models and sizes and appropriate patterns for men of all ages and builds.

These suits would have been sold weeks ago except for greatly delayed deliveries, many of them having been received during the last month.

We realize that these mark-down prices we now name are sensational. Furthermore, they involve a tremendous financial loss. But we're willing to pay the penalty in order to make a complete clearance. Make the most of it.

$40 and $45 Suits are now $27.50

$50, $55, $60, $65 Suits are now $37.50

Every suit in the store is included except Blacks, Blues and Outings. A large proportion are of medium weight fabrics, such as a great many men wear throughout the entire year.

BIGGEST INTERNATIONAL GOLF MATCH IN YEARS ON AT BELMONT

U. S. TEAM BATTLES BRITONS

Latter Have Chance for Revenge on Ouimet, Who Defeated Them in 1913

Road for the Belmont Spring Club today. A baseball fan may care for his world series and a yachtsman for his America Cup races, but when it comes to Ouimet against Vardon and Ray the golf bugs go crazy.

Crowd Largest Ever on Local Links

A long stream of automobiles raced into the driveway of the Belmont Club early today. Each car was loaded with enthusiasts, eager to run and like the three or four miles over the Belmont hills and dales in the hope of seeing the big fellows play a few shots. Because of the great crowd no one hoped to see all of the match.

The Belmont club officials were confronted with the task of controlling the largest golf crowd that ever gathered in the Boston district, if not in America. They hoped to accomplish this by the aid of ropes and megaphones.

Weather conditions were perfect for the match and the course was in fine shape.

Match Gives Britons Chance for Revenge

In a certain sense today's was a revenge match, affording Ray and Vardon opportunity to even a score of seven years' standing with Ouimet, one of the American team fighting to check the victorious drive of the British.

Neither of the latter could have forgotten the manner in which Ouimet snatched away the American open crown in the play-off at the Country Club back in 1913.

Vardon and Ray have been winning on their present tour. They have been "showing up" American golfers, professional as well as amateur. They even went so far as to beat Walter Hagen, the American champion, and Jim Barnes, Iowa and New Britain they added two more victories in eighteen-hole matches to their list.

The New Britain victims were Bobby Andrews and Jack Ebsheck, Connecticut professionals, who lost by one down, and Roger Hoyer and Parker Seeley, Connecticut amateurs, who were conquered, 7 and 6. As in all of their matches, Ray shot the best golf, turning in one round of 72.

Today's Match Unusual in Many Respects

Today's foursome is unusual in many ways. Its chief call for attention is because, after a lapse of seven years, Vardon and Ray have come back to Boston to give battle to the young man who beat them at Brookline. The match will also be an international struggle, America vs. England. Then it will be youth vs. age, for as golfers go, Vardon and Ray are veterans.

All of the players have achieved great fame, Vardon, of course, tops them all in this respect, for he has been playing championship golf for more years than Ouimet and Guilford are old. He won the British open championship for the first time in 1896, and has four other wins in the same tournament to his credit. He won the American open title in 1900.

Ouimet Learned Golf While a Caddy

Ted Ray won the British open championship in 1912. He finished third this year at Deal and has won many other important events.

France Ouimet learned the game as a caddy at the Brookline Country Club course. He won the American open championship in 1913 and the French and American amateur titles in 1914. Boston golfers are convinced that Francis never played better than he has this season and that he will do his share to bring in an American victory tonight.

Jesse Guilford won the New Hampshire amateur championship when a boy in short trousers and in 1916 he won the Massachusetts amateur championship. Last year he won the State open title.

Bayley and Adams Win at Brae-Burn

J. C. Bayley and C. H. Adams won the four-ball best-ball tournament of the University Club of Boston at the Brae-Burn Country Club. Their joint efforts resulted in 88, which was seven strokes better than their nearest opponents, N. W. Dean and R. S. Steinert, who were tied with R. H. Smith and R. R. McNeil for the first net prize, each having a 78.

Marston Defeats Rival by 10 and 8

Manchester, Vt., July 30.—Max R. Marston defeated George H. Hatch in the first round of play for the Isham cup at Ekwanok Country Club 10 up and 8 to play.

Marston played one stroke better than par golf in accomplishing the feat. Not to be outdone by his rival, Hatch also played par golf, but was unable to overcome the lead.

Ted Ray, former British Open Champion, and Francis Ouimet.

A. T. Walker, Jr., a Columbia student, and 1919 intercollegiate champion, closed his match with Martin W. Littleton, Jr., of Princeton at the eleventh green by 5 up and 7 to play. Walker was but one stroke more than Marston for the same distance. As these two are in opposite ends of the frame there is a fair probability of their meeting in the final match Saturday.

BARNES LEADING "PRO" FIELD

Sunset Hill Golfer Has Total of 143 for 36 Holes at Greenwich, Ct.

Greenwich, Ct., July 30.—Jim Barnes, the St. Louis professional, led at the end of the second day's play for the Metropolitan golf championship, Barnes follows a little on the greens, but got around in 74, which added to his record-breaking 69 of Wednesday, made his total for thirty-six holes, 143.

Walter Hagen, the defending champion, not only faltered but skidded downhill with considerable speed, and instead of trailing the Cornishman by two strokes, the title holder is now five strokes in the wake of Barnes.

Snuggling right up to Barnes and only a stroke behind is the dark horse, Willie MacFarlane, the slender, pink-cheeked Fort Washington boy. MacFarlane, Scottie added a 72 to his previously acquired 71 and holds second place with a total of 144. Third place is a tie between J. Douglas Edgar and Wilfrid Reid.

BUGS BAER'S COLUMN

Now that Tommy Lipton is taking his expensive ocean habits back to England, the time has come for Americans to look each other in between the eyes and to be honest unless it is absolutely necessary.

Where are the works going to? That is the burning question being asked our asbestos cars.

Folks' skull pieces seem to be on a vacation and their brains are Weejee boarded up for the Summer.

The Weejee plank has the country cutting out paper weights. All over our wooded business streets and smiling valleys, Americans and Americanettes are wrestling with Weejee boards trying to grab a celestial number with the aid of a Weejee control.

It's all wrong like a giraffe with a sore neck, a crocodile with spinal meningitis or a centipede with corns. Sir Conned Doyle is right about one thing. There is communication with the dead letter office and Burleson is his prophet.

Put a non-skid tread on the Weejee log, add a piece of soap and some laundrey, and it would be a useful article of bungalow furniture, provided daughter didn't wait for the angel to assist her with the washing.

Scientists buzz that 10 per cent. of Americans are busy over the Weejee number and 10 per cent. more are voting a split ticket on the ghost plank. Adding these up with the other Brazilian envoys, it looks as if they had a quorum and the next President will write his vetoes with a three-legged wooden bug on Weejee stationery.

Fortunately, the average citizen who wears silk sox but is good to his mother, figures on the Weejee board as just another place to park a piece of chewing gum.

This rash of Weejee humidity, the country will still run on its flat tires. We can borrow money with one hand, pay the taxes with the other and wish we could use our feet like monkeys.

BRAVES AND CUBS GO AFTER RUBBER GAME OF SERIES TODAY

McQUILLAN AGAINST HENDRIX

Probable Pitching Selection for the Final Game of Series

By NICK FLATLEY

The Braves and the Cubs concluded a series today that has been speckled with good, bad and indifferent baseball, and has thus far resulted in a couple of wins for each yardt. Uncertainty is the rule at Ye large orchard these days, and girly large crowds are consequently flying a bit of fun.

Hugh McQuillan, who ranks well up in the list of Brave flingers, was picked to chuck, with Claude Hendrix on the other end of the tossing yarn.

With the big golf doings, the Ponzi trials, and other Sestic sporting events on, real rivalry is needed to magnetize the well-known dollars into the orchard. The rivalry was dreamed up in the recent tilt by young Mister Twombley, who slid father recklessly into the platter.

His victim was one perfectly good pair of flannel trousers, size 34, and with flannels as costly as it happens to be, the damage was considerable. Mickey O'Neil was inside the trousers before the young man slid, but after that—well Mickey scrambled off the field blushing furiously, and greatly embarrassed and everything.

Twombley Gets His From All Sides

The crowd and the Boston athletes immediately jumped on young Mister Twombley, and many mean things were said, very, very mean. It had the fray all excited up and helped quite a bit, as our Braves were having one of their good days, among other things thumping the ball proper Cleveland Alexander off the bound.

John Watson made his Boston debut, and it was a most successful affair, the Cubs getting but two runs and seven hits, while our Braves were collecting six counters on twice as many base knocks. John Watson is one sweet little pitcher, the opposite Charles Dryden originally, remarked after watching the youth fling a couple.

Cruise Returns to Braves' Lineup

Charles said a mouthful as usual, for John showed plenty of stuff, dandy control and superb nonchalance out there on the hill. He also has a habit of his—this beating Alexander—and it's a pleasant habit for the Braves.

One of the cripples got back into organics as the tall old Texas Walton Cruise celebrating his return by getting a single and a sacrifice hit. There was plenty of thumping, and only nifty outfield support kept the native total down to the aforementioned six.

The Braves accorded Watson splendid support, likewise, and altogether the pastime was the snappiest affair we've gazed at for quite a bit this somewhat weary season.

Baseball Results

Dorchester Town Team, 7; Magoun Square Civic Association, 7 (nine innings).

Cleveland Jrs., 15; North End Jrs., 6.

Fitchburg, 2; Cornets, 1.

Arlington, 7; Boston Tigers, 2.

Train Operators, 9; Navy Yard, 4.

Taunton, 3; Falmouth, 2 (ten innings).

Simplex, 7; Concord Jct., 5.

Solari Jrs., 12; Lafayettes, 11.

Head Telegrapher in Near Accident

Mickey O'Neil wasn't wounded—except in feelings—by Twombley's slide, and appeared afterward in a pair of spotless knickers that were out, in decidedly nobby riding habit lines. What with tunics and shirts, and spikes and the like, Mickey is having his share of excitement just about now.

Jim Shannon, the head telegrapher, was nearly torpedoed by a foul tip that lit in the press coop, and a movement has been started to have ear effervescent James screened in up there—otherwise he might be injured, and then who could keep us posted on Babe Ruth's home runs, and the yacht races and everything like that?

RED SOX BLOW ANOTHER GAME

Harper Weakens in Eighth Inning and Indians Jump Into Lead

Cleveland, O., July 30.—Manager Ed Barrow is about convinced that it's a waste of energy to send southpaws against the Indians. They maltreated Harry Harper to such an extent Wednesday that he lasted only a couple of innings. Thursday Herb Pennock looked like a million dollars for a considerable portion of the game and then; well, look at the seven-run count in the eighth and you'll find your answer.

So Barrow resolved to trot out a northpaw Joe Bush today, to hang it on to the Indians, for whom Ray Caldwell was twirling.

Red Sox Get Early Lead; Fail to Hold It

The Red Sox went into the lead in the second inning, when a brace of singles and a sacrifice netted through the good hitting of Everett Scott and Wallie Schang. They held the advantage until the sixth when Smith singled, Gardner doubled and Burns batting for Wamlsganss, tripled.

The tie was brief, however, as the Red Sox forged to the front in the next round. Again Scott and Schang were the batting heroes. Wally doubled, was sacrificed to third base by McInnis and scored by Scott's long hoist to Smith.

Cleveland went scoreless in the second half of the seventh and blanked the Red Sox in the opening part of the eighth.

DEPARTMENT STORE LEAGUE NOTES

With the season almost at its half-way mark, three stores of the six stand out in the Department Store League. Whiten, Hoveys and Talbots, each who have lost but one game, seem to be the ones who will fight it out for the title.

Jim Murray of Talbots has set a record for the other pitchers in the league to shoot at. In the past three games in which he has faced Butlers, Brogans and Shumans for a total of sixteen innings he has struck out thirty-seven players. This is better than twice a game.

Another record which will be hard to equal is number of Shumans reaching or getting forced runs in the Talbot game, six men, only one hit, made by Tom Rafferty, was made off Murray.

FULTON CAN'T STAND THE ROUGH BOYS

After his showing with Wills the other night we're convinced that Fulton doesn't like them rough. Wills tore in from the end of the gong, tossed the tall plasterer around a few times and traded lefts and rights.

Fulton backed away from the onslaughts, but smiled, as though he had his man measured. In the next two rounds Wills did the same thing, but instead of getting better Fulton slowed up.

The right hand uppercut he got wouldn't have killed a welter, yet Fulton took the old count as though he were dead.

The same thing happened when he fought Dempsey. A great many of the spectators that day failed to see the right hand punch that dropped Frederick, yet both he and Dempsey declare that it landed.

Before the fight the other night the writer saw Dempsey and asked him about Fulton.

"He's a good fighter," said Jack with a grin, "but he's scared of me. I think I'm poison to him. I'd like to take him on again just to prove it to the boys. He thinks he was double-crossed that day. Well, any old time that the people want to see us together again I'm willing to start."

Western Fighters Coming Here

Warren Brown writes to tell us that three "Frisco stars are coming East and he expects big things of them. His star is a bantam, Bud Ridley, and Brown says that he's a little Dempsey. He writes:

"The kid tears in from the tap of the gong, never clinches, can take them and can give them, and looks as cool as an Eskimo's back porch. The other fighters coming with him are Jimmy Duffy, the dandy lightweight from Oakland, and Battling Ortego, who recently fought Mike O'Dowd a draw in Portland."

This is in Alberta, Canada. Fifty-eight inches is nearly five feet, and just think how many fingers it would make.

BIG NIGHT FOR BIKE FANS

Motor-Paced Race and Finals in Professional Sprints at Revere Tomorrow

The bike fans who love speed are in for a big night tomorrow if Manager Butler's plans as now arranged go through. Two big races have been carded, a thirty-five-mile motor paced event and the finals of the New England professional sprint championships, both of which should furnish some red hot riding if not new records.

The motor race will be a three-cornered affair with Carman, Didier and Cory on the mark. All three are reported to be going faster than ever which means something close to 1:16 in the case of both Carman and Didier as they have been traveling speedily for some time while Corey is sure to keep his end up.

In the professional sprints for the title the best known of the local men will be seen.

The regular card of amateur and professional events will complete the program.

MUGGSY TO BOX K. O. MILLER

East Boston Youth Must Be Right to Avoid Defeat in Bout at Lewiston Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

Kajo Muggsy will try to come back when he meets Harry Miller in a twelve-round bout at Lewiston tonight. Athletes have been attempting this stunt since the days when the Greeks were supreme in sports.

Howard Drew, the world's greatest sprinter back in 1912, recently made a gallant effort to gain a place on the American Olympic team. He qualified in the trials, but was hopelessly outclassed in the finals by younger and stronger men. Drew was once able to cover 100 yards in 9 2-5 seconds, but he hasn't found a formula which will beat Father Time.

When Muggsy starts against Miller at Lewiston, he won't have to worry about the aged gentleman who cuts short the careers of athletes when they would make one more effort to fame. Muggsy is only twenty-two years old and might be ranked high in his boxing division today if he had paid a little attention to training.

The Last Boston boxer says he has learned his lesson and that he will be fit when he enters the ring against Miller. He will be beaten if he isn't right, for Miller is one of those lucky persons who realize the advantage of keeping in condition.

Sharkey Confident of Kayoing Martin

You have to hand it to Jack Sharkey, New York bantamweight, when it comes to having confidence in his own ability to score victories. Before Sharkey met Jimmy Wilde at Milwaukee few fans believed the lad from Big Broadway would trounce the Britisher. When the returns were all in, Sharkey had cornered all the rounds.

Now Sharkey comes to bat with the announcement he will stop Terry Martin, New England bantamweight champion, whom he is listed to meet in a twelve-round session at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night. This is going to be a tough assignment. Martin is one of those rough, tough fellows who can punch as hard as a light-weight. He has fought right away as many as fifteen pounds and still breezed across the wire a winner. Sharkey has an idea he can kayo Martin as the latter always carries the battle to his opponent. But the Yorker points out that big big trouble in life has been in chasing rivals around the ring.

Fitz Winds Up Training for Murphy Bout

Billy Fitzsimmons, Chelsea featherweight, started training for his twelve-round tussle with Billy Murphy of Staten Island, which will be staged at Spalding Park, Lowell tomorrow afternoon. Fitzsimmons has made a big hit with the fans in Lowell and one of the country as a result of his fast, clever boxing and ring generalship. Murphy has scrapped blown with some of the best featherweights in the East and avers he will hand Billy a real ear reverse.

So as to be protected against a possible hot night, Frankie De Lisle will stage Bobby Joseph-Dick Loadman bout in Exposition Hall, Portland, next Monday night. This hall has splendid ventilation and should be cool regardless of what tricks the mercury may attempt to pull off. Loadman is out to land a match with Johnny Kilbane, and so does Joseph. Should Loadman be at the hands of the South End youth, Joseph is also aiming high in the dear old pugilistic firmament, and is just as eager to come through with a victory as his rival.

Who's Who on the American Olympic Team

EARL EBY,
Chicago A. A.

Earl Eby is another one of the Olympic track men who will represent America in three events. He will compete in both the 400 and 800 metres run and also will be a member of the relay team. Eby won the 440-yard dash at the national tryouts at the Stadium and also won the Eastern tryouts and the intercollegiate quarter-mile titles.

SEEK O'CONNELL FOR TOP LINER

Scotch Games Committee Wants Harvard Captain to Run in Walter Scott Mile

Every effort is being made by the management of the Scotch games, which are to be held at Caledonian Grove on Saturday, August 7, to have Dennis O'Connell, the sensational Harvard miler and winner of the Intercollegiate mile in 1919, a starter in the "Walter Scott Mile."

The last time Dennie competed was in the New England track and field championships held at Franklin Field, but owing to the fact that he had not fully recovered from the injury to his ankle, caused by a fall at the Legion games at Braves Field last October, he was unable to finish. However, O'Connell has been training very consciencionsly since these championships and today is in very excellent condition.

He did not compete in the recent Olympic tryouts as he would not be able to get away from business to make the trip to Antwerp.

With the entry of O'Connell added to those of Harold Cuthill of the B. A. A. Garland Courage of the New York A. C., J. A. Caffrey, national junior half-mile champion, and Chris O'Leary, runner-up to Courage in the junior mile championship, what a wonderful race is that "Walter Scott mile" is in store for the lovers of track athletics, one that will produce a winner whose name will go down alongside those of Willie Gordon, Mike Devaney and Jimmy Connolly, former winners of this yearly classic.

ROSLINDALE TO PLAY CRIMMINS-PIERCE TEAM

JULIAN resolved to watch. After all he was the husband of Teodora; he had the right to protect her as well as himself. Why not send Ernesto away, asked his conscience—you can do it with a word—send him away and set yourself at rest.

No, said the voice of self-esteem—that would be publicly confessing a wrong—that would never do—he was torn by indecision, he silenced his inner soul by prudence and resolved to keep his eye open for wrongdoing on the part of the woman he loved.

Don Severo and Mercedes had succeeded. Don Julian was no longer a man; he was a creature bent on discovering what he had been led to believe must exist because the world said so. He had become the world's creature.

He waited and watched; and as he waited his brother waited too. Ernesto and Teodora working away in the studio, doors open, read aloud and laughed together, while the husband endured the agony of the man who doubts.

From the Balcony

From an upper room skirted with a balcony one could look down and see them. Don Severo walked into his brother's studio and took his arm. "Come with me," he said softly and led him half protesting to view his wife and the poet. The latter was reading; he stopped and they heard him say, "Poor Paolo loved his friend's wife devotedly, loyally, till blind suspicion drove them into one another's arms."

Julian shrank back as though the lash of a whip had stung him across his face. The two men walked slowly back. Don Severo trying to conceal a smile of triumph.

His brother paced the floor. "I shall speak to him," he said in a tone that sounded quite strange. "I shall speak to him now." He braced himself and descended the stairs.

As he entered the room Teodora turned to him: "We've been discussing a situation," she said, "now Julian, do you think suspicion and evil gossip can accomplish what brute force cannot?"

There was a gleam in his eye that frightened her. She rose quickly and went to him—his voice trembled.

"I know nothing of these things," he said. "I wish to see Ernesto alone." He waved to her after the manner of the Spanish grandee, and with a look of pained wonder on her face she left the men together.

"You wish to see me?" Ernesto had risen surprised. "What can it be, Don Julian? I have you something for me to do."

"Yes. I have something I must tell you." His agitated appearance gave the young man the impression that he had suffered some financial reverse.

Gossips Busy

"The gossips are linking the name of my wife with yours."

Ernesto went pale, but he faced his patron with the eyes of innocence. "I swear on my father's name I am free from even a suspicion of disloyalty to you."

The hot wrath of the older man cooled, but he still looked strangely shaken.

The boy jumped to the conclusion that perhaps illness was at the bottom of his strange hallucination.

"You are ill?" he cried.

"Yes, I am ill of a disease that is gnawing my brain and eating the life out of my very heart."

The young man extended his hands in a despairing gesture, as though he would have offered his life if he could have removed the cause of the husband's suspicion.

"You are unhappy?" he cried. "Gossip has plunged a knife into your soul. But it remains easy, my dear Don Julian—what so simple! I shall go away—it is better—it is right; henceforth your name must be as sacred to the world as it is to you and to me!"

The attitude of the young man did not fail to impress the older. It seemed for a moment that he had been the victim of a baseless slander. It seemed preposterous that he should ask his poet friend to leave his house because of attacks which Julian now assured himself were infamously unjust.

His eye kindled he put an arm about the other's shoulders; "Ernesto, forgive me—I was hasty—I was thinking of Teodora—I trust you—you know that—and I ask you again to forget my words."

The Restless Sex -:-

WATCH FOR THIS STORY IN MOTION PICTURES

"The Restless Sex," soon to be seen in all leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

By Robert W. Chambers

I FORGOT to tell you that Oswald Grismer's father and mother are dead within a week of each other. Pneumonia! Poor boy, he is stunned. He wrote me. He won't give any more teas for the present, but I'm to drop in the next time I'm in town. I believe he has inherited a great deal of money. I'm glad, because now he will be able to devote every second to creative work without a thought of financial gain.

Harry Belter is such a funny fat man. He asks after you every time I meet him. I sent you some of his cartoons in the Star. Badger Spink is an odd sort of a man with his big boyish figure and his mass of pompadour hair and his childish guileless energy and amazing talent. He draws, draws, draws all the time; you see his pictures in every periodical; yet he seems to have time for all sorts of gaiety, private theatricals, dances, entertainments. He belongs to the Players, the Ten Cent Club, the Dutch Treat, Illustrators, Lotus, Coffee House, Two by Four—and about a hundred others—and I think he's president of most of them. He always sends his regards to you and requests to know whether you've got fed up with Latin Quarter stuff—whatever that means!

And Clarence Verne always mentions you. Such a curious man with a face like Pharaoh, and Egyptian hands, too, deeply cut in between thumb and forefinger like the hands of people sculptured in bas reliefs on Egyptian tombs.

Lovely Painting

But such lovely girls he paints—so exquisite! He is a very odd man—with a fixed gaze, and speaks as though he were a trifle deaf—or drugged, or something.

You haven't said much about yourself, Jim, in you last letters; and also your letters arrive at longer intervals.

Somehow, I think you are becoming reconciled to Paris. I don't believe you feel sorry Jones any longer. But what do you do to amuse yourself after your hours of work are ended? Those who are your new friends over there? For, of course, you must have made new friends—I don't mean the students whose names you have occasionally mentioned. Haven't you met any nice girls?

He did not mention having met any girls nice or otherwise, when he wrote again. He did say that he was enjoying his work and that he had begun to feel a certain affection for Paris—particularly after he had been away travelling in Germany, Spain and Italy. Really, he admitted, it was like coming home. The usual was still happening to James Cleland.

He had an apartment, now, overlooking the Luxembourg Gardens. He had friends to dinner sometimes. There was always plenty to do. Life had become very inspiring. The French theatres were a liberal education. French literature a miracle of artistic clarity and a model for all young aspirants. In fact, the Spring source of all art was France, and Paris the ornamental fountain jet from which flashed the ever-living waters that all may quaff.

Very poetic. He did not add that some of the waters were bottled and kept in pails of chopped ice.

He wrote many gracefully composed pages—when he wrote at all—concerning the mists, beauty of the French landscape and the effect of the rising sun of Notre Dame. He had seen it rise several times.

Behaved Discreetly

But on the whole, he behaved discreetly and with much circumspection; and within his youthful heart lay that deathless magic of the creative mind which transmutes leaden reality into golden romance—which is blind to the sordid and which transforms it into the picturesque.

A saucy smile from a pretty girl on an April day germinated into a graceful string of verses by night; a chance encounter by the Seine, a laugh, a gay adieu—and a delicate short story was born, perhaps to be labored over and groomed and swaddled and nourished into life—or to be abandoned, perhaps, in the back yard of literary debris.

Life ran evenly and pleasantly for Cleland in those deathless days—light, happy, irresponsible days when idleness becomes saturated with future energy unawares; when the liberality, the vastness and the inspiration of the world began to dawn upon a youthful intellect, not oppressively, but with a wide and reassuring kindliness.

There was a young girl—very pretty, whose loneliness made her not too conventional. After several encounters on the stairs, she smiled in response; and they crossed the Luxembourg Gardens together, strolling in the chestnut shade and exchanging views of life.

The affair continued—charming and quite harmless—a touch of tragedy and tears one evening—and the boy deeply touched and temporarily in love—his love was love, temporarily embodied in this blue-eyed, white-skinned, slender girl who had wandered with him close to the dead line and was inclined to cross it—with him.

Many Experiences

He had a delightfully wretched hour of renunciation—and was rewarded with much future material, though he didn't know it at the time.

There were tears—several. It is not certain that she spiritually appreciated the situation. That sort of gratitude seldom is genuine in the feminine heart.

But such things are very real to the creative mind, and Cleland was far too unhappy to sleep—deeply wallowing in martyrdom. Fate laughed and pinned this little episode on the clothes line to dry out with the others—quite a little line full, now, all fluttering gaily there and drying in the sun. And after a proper interval Cleland went about the business of washing out a few more samples of experience in the life and manners and customs of his time, later to be added to the clothes line to wash.

He had to prod himself to write to Stephanie. He was finding it a little difficult to discover very much to say to her. In youth two people grow apart during absence much faster than they grow together when in each other's company.

It was so with Cleland and Stephanie—less so with her.

Not seeing her for nearly two years left him with the unconscious impression that she had not altered during that period—that she was still the same young girl he had left, no more mature, no more experienced, little wiser.

Her letters were interesting but he had lost touch, in a measure, with interests and people at home. He had adapted himself to the new angle of vision, to the new aspect of life, to new ideals, new aspirations. He was at the source of inspiration, drinking frequently at fonts, always unconsciously absorbing.

No Desire to Go Back

At the end of the two years he had no desire to return to New York.

A series of voluminous letters passed between him and Stephanie and between him and Miss Quest.

He had plenty of excuses for remaining another year; his education was not completed; he needed a certain atmosphere and a certain environment which could be enjoyed only in Europe.

Of course, if he were needed in New York, etc., etc.

No, he wasn't needed. Matters could be attended to. The house in Eighteen street ought to be closed as it was a useless expense to keep the servants there.

Poor old Meacham had died. Janet, too, was dead; Lizzie had gone back to Ireland. The house in town, should, therefore, be closed and wired; and the house in the country. Runner's Rest, should remain closed and in charge of the farmer who had always looked out for it.

This could be attended to, no need of his coming back.

So he wrote his directions to Stephanie and settled down again with a sigh of relief to the golden days which promised.

His work, now deeply colored by Gallic influence and environment, had developed to that stage of embryonic promise mixed by mannerisms and affectations. His style, temporarily spoiled by a sort of Franco-American jargon, became involved in the swamps of pizzyological subtleties, emerging jerkily at times, or relapsing into Debussy-like redundancy.

Nobody wanted six short stories, his poems, his impressions. Publishers in London and in America returned "Day Dreams" and "Out of the Depths" with polite regrets. He sounded every depth of despondency and self-distrust; he soared on wings of hope again, striving to keep his gaze on the blinding source of light, only to become confused and dazzled in the upper oceans and waver and flutter and come tumbling down, frantically beating the too rarified atmosphere with unaccustomed wings.

Must Find the Way

Nobody could tell him. He had to find out the way. He had within him what was worth saying; but not yet learned how to say it. The massed testimony of the masters lay heavily indigested within him; he was too richly fed, stuffed; the intricacies and complexities of technique were a weariness of wading out a few more samples of experience in the life and manners and customs of his time, later to be added to the clothes line to wash.

He had to prod himself to write to Stephanie. He was finding it a little difficult to discover very much to say to her. In youth two people grow apart during absence much faster than they grow together when in each other's company.

His style, temporarily spoiled by a sort of Franco-American jargon, became involved in the swamps of pizzyological subtleties, emerging jerkily at times, or relapsing into Debussy-like redundancy.

Nobody wanted six short stories, his poems, his impressions. Publishers in London and in America returned "Day Dreams" and "Out of the Depths" with polite regrets. He sounded every depth of despondency and self-distrust; he soared on wings of hope again, striving to keep his gaze on the blinding source of light, only to become confused and dazzled in the upper oceans and waver and flutter and come tumbling down, frantically beating the too rarified atmosphere with unaccustomed wings.

Must Find the Way

Nobody could tell him. He had to find out the way. He had within him what was worth saying; but not yet learned how to say it. The massed testimony of the masters lay heavily indigested within him; he was too richly fed, stuffed; the intricacies and complexities of technique were a weariness of wading out a few more samples of experience in the life and manners and customs of his time, later to be added to the clothes line to wash.

He had to prod himself to write to Stephanie. He was finding it a little difficult to discover very much to say to her. In youth two people grow apart during absence much faster than they grow together when in each other's company.

It was so with Cleland and Stephanie—less so with her.

Not seeing her for nearly two years left him with the unconscious impression that she had not altered during that period—that she was still the same young girl he had left, no more mature, no more experienced, little wiser.

Her letters were interesting but he had lost touch, in a measure, with interests and people at home. He had adapted himself to the new angle of vision, to the new aspect of life, to new ideals, new aspirations. He was at the source of inspiration, drinking frequently at fonts, always unconsciously absorbing.

Aprons for All Times of Day

By Rita Stuyvesant

FOR the Summer season there are some delightfully dainty aprons for all hours of the day, from the morning apron that does quite well as a dress at the bungalow, to the elaborate little tea apron for afternoon.

For mornings the big coverall aprons are both attractive and practical. Plain and checked ginghams are suitable with perhaps trimmings of snowy white. These aprons slipon and are "closed" up the front with a white string and are finished with a deep sailor collar, and for convenience show short sleeves.

Another pretty apron sure to please is cut from heavy cretonne and all bound round with braid. One apron of this kind was cut from dark fruited cretonne and bound in French blue braid. The skirt section was in one piece and gathered rather full with a top bib and shoulder straps. Big streamers of the material were tied in the back.

Then there are exquisite little aprons that one wears at the tea-table, and very lovely they are, too, for the Summer bride. Colored organdy, in rose, maize, pink, ciel, gray, lettuce green and orchid are all dainty for the tea apron.

Heart-shaped and frilled for the occasion is a pretty little apron of rose colored organdy with big crisp sash. This little apron is simple to make, outlined with a narrow frill of the material. The strings, six inches wide, are hemmed by hand.

Sometimes there is a bit of embroidery, done either in silk or wool in a contrasting color. An apron of pale yellow organdy is of blue silk and shows a tiny cup and saucer in the lower left hand corner. Sometimes a few flowers or buds are worked and sometimes one may use a steaming tea-kettle.

Soft voile in pastel shades fashions attractive little aprons and one for sewing shows a border of pockets at the bottom for needle, thread and thimble, too.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Magee

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

MAGEE
VARIATIONS — McHugh, Mackay, McKee, Pugh, Hughson, Hewson, Hughes.
RACIAL ORIGIN—Ancient Celtic; also Teutonic.
SOURCE—Given names.

STRICTLY speaking, the family names mentioned are traceable to just two separate and distinct sources, one Celtic and the other Teutonic. Yet the names have become so interwoven in their influences on one another that it is more convenient to discuss them all together.

Lost in the antiquity of Celtic mythology there is a name so old that even its meaning is not clear, though apparently it developed in reference to the pagan gods. In the Gaelic division of the Celtic race, that is, the Irish and the Scots, it runs through history as the name "Aadh," which, despite the difference in spelling, is quite close to the pronunciation of the Cymric (Welsh, Cornish and Breton) "Hu."

Naturally, when the Anglo-Saxons and the Normans came along with the name "Hugh," a development of the old Teutonic "hugur," meaning "thought" or "thoughtfulness," confusion resulted.

From the Gaelic form of the Celtic name ("Aodh") have come Magee, McKee and the anglicized form McHugh, in Ireland, and in Scotland, Mackay. The Welsh Pugh is a contraction of Ap-Hugh. It ought to be "Ap-Hu," and then "Pu."

Hughes and Hewson, of course, are variations of the Saxon and Norman "Hugh's-son," or Hughson.

Some of the Irish McHughes, however, trace their names back to the given names of Norman invaders of Ireland, who dropped Norman customs and formed family names after the Irish fashion from their given names.

Hughes, strangely enough, is a derivation of the name Magee, and means affability, in Gaelic, so one authority tells us. The Hugheses in America have been illustrious, from the first Hughes down.

One of the earliest illustrious Hughes was one Joseph "Hewes," a signer of the Declaration of Independence. George Robert Twelve Hughes, at the head of the Boston tea party, also came to the fore in American history, quite early. Then a James Hughes, of Pennsylvania, was a member of Washington's bodyguard. The very earliest Hughes on record, figures in the histories, as "one" Hughes, who commanded a vessel which early in 1624 landed at Cape Anne to establish a fishing station and colony. Henry Freeman Hughes, of East Haven, was another early settler in America.

Tomorrow—Roberts.

Household Suggestions

A soiled black coat can be quickly cleaned by applying to it with a sponge strong coffee to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Finish the process by rubbing the coat with a piece of colored woolen cloth.

* * *

Don't throw the feet of chicken away, but clean them carefully and put them in the stock pot.

* * *

To remove iron rust from linen or cotton goods boil a small quantity of rhubarb and dip in that portion of the material which is spotted.

* * *

Don't peel apples for apple sauce, wipe them well, cut up without peeling, add water and cook till thoroughly soft, then run the pulp through a coarse sieve.

* * *

Lace that is desired to have an "old lace" shade will soon do so if after washing it is dipped in the water potatoes have been boiled in; care must be taken not to get this too stiff.

* * *

For waterproofing shoes, equal quantities of white wax, olive oil and rectified lard, melted down, make an excellent mixture, but a little oil of turpentine should also be added.

GAIN WEIGHT AND STRENGTH

With Bitro-Phosphate on $300 Guarantee

New York. If you are feeling run down, weak, nervous, tired in the morning and generally ailing, these are the symptoms that should warn you to take care of your health.

Four persons in every ten are needing more phosphorous in their bodies. When you see this and "feel" and "look" as these who are anaemic, pale, frail, off desposdent or lacking in energy, you may look for the beginning of certain elements that make for a strong constitution.

Some people after trying many preparations composed chiefly of salts, quinine, iron, arsenic, strychnine, nux vomica, etc. wonder why they find no benefit. That is easily explained by the fact that such persons need the phosphoric element, which is a most potent, essential to health, and contained in BITRO PHOSPHATE, too frequently overlooked by many physicians for weakness.

The right thing for you to do is make a trial of BITRO-PHOSPHATE, beginning at once. It is not a patent medicine; the formula is prescribed by many physicians for the ailments and weaknesses mentioned above.

With every box of BITRO-PHOSPHATE are given absolutely health rules, and a $300 guarantee bond goes with every package of BITRO-PHATE. It is sold and recommended by all good druggists everywhere. Advertisement.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

ONE minute she was flinging a challenge at Jim. The next she was trying to lure Carl to her side with little, soft, gentle, flattering motions. And the next she was attempting to be at once suave and smooth to me and at the same time to obliterate me from her consciousness.

That Daisy hated me was now perfectly clear. That she loved Carl was just as plain. And the connection between the two was her complete misunderstanding and misinterpretation of my friendship for him and his for me.

A Trying Position

My position was trying, to say the least, with Jim and Daisy both ready to misread this dear old friendship of mine. With both of them resenting it and making themselves miserable over it, the obvious thing to do was give it up. But how could I put Carl Booth out of my life without giving him grave offense? And what right have I to suppose as dear and boyish and as high-motived and loyal as Carl? In the midst of my study of ways and means, Carl forged another link in the chain of old friendship that bound us.

"Barbara Anne, do you remember the day you gladdened my life by stopping in for a soda with me on the avenue?" he asked with a naturalness and frankness which ought to have told both Jim and Daisy what a simple, harmless attitude he took toward me.

"I remember," I replied, "even unto the raspberry soda we took in unison."

At that Jim and Daisy actually exchanged glances. To myself I called them a pair of sillies, but even as I did I wondered where such silliness could sweep us all.

"And do you remember the plump, pretty little blonde at the next table? No, you couldn't. I didn't either. But I bumped into her on the street today and she stopped me and recalled herself and pleaded for a chance to see you again. It was Irma Warren."

"Irma Warren?" I repeated idly. Then a flash of memory recalled her very pleasantly. "That's Mr. Haldane's niece, isn't it? The nice, little, old-fashioned thing who keeps house for her uncle, and who was so sweet to us when we went there to do our work that time he was laid up with bronchitis?"

"The very one," replied Carl. "She strikes me as a mighty nice girl. No nonsense or swagger to her, just as friendly as if she were a little nobody instead of the boss's kin. She seems to admire you a lot, Barbara Anne. So how can we fix it up for you to meet again?"

"We don't seem included in this party, Mr. Herriman. It looks as if we were partners again—in misery this time, instead of setting a table. Do you mind being cast into the discard with me like this?" she challenged lobbily.

A Way Out

My gallant Jim, never at a loss for a graceful thing to say, was almost awkward now. He couldn't hide that he did mind being paired off with Daisy, for he almost thrust himself into the foreground in his determination to end the easy friendliness Carl seemed to take for granted.

"If Miss Warren wants to renew her acquaintance with my wife," he said possessively, "why can't we have her and her uncle in for dinner? You were always very fond of Mr. Haldane, weren't you, Anne?"

"That's a jolly good idea," said Carl heartily. "Daisy ought to have a chance to know a wholesome, real girl like Irma Warren. You're right when you figure that the Chief isn't a bit of a snob. He'll be as glad to dine with Daisy and me as if we were regular swells."

"Yes, he will be glad to dine with one of his little stenographers—yes, he will," murmured Daisy bitterly.

But, ignoring her comment, we settled on a night that would do for all of us, if it suited Mr. Haldane and his niece. Then we made a great lark of clearing the table and washing the dishes. After that Carl suggested bridge—a game at which I'm not at all expert.

As we sat down to the table I noticed the avid expression on Daisy's face. It had lighted to absolute eagerness. This might have been because she had drawn Carl for a partner, but I had a feeling that it was due to something else. Daisy's expression was akin to Jim's—the gambler's eagerness.

"What are we playing for?" asked Daisy.

I choked back the impulse to cry out, "How dare a little-paid worker like you play for money?" But Jim, seeming to perceive Daisy for the first time, murmured approvingly: "Good for you, little sport!"

EXPECT FREIGHT RATE DECISION THIS WEEK

Reports current in financial districts yesterday led investors and speculators to expect this week a decision as to the freight rate increases to be allowed railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission. One private wire dispatch said it was looked for on Saturday, as it is now in the hands of the printers, and that it would allow the roads $3 per ton of coal more than asked for, or practically $1,000,000,000.

The roads asked originally for rate increases which would yield them $1,017,000,000 additional revenue, and it is understood that the pending award includes in addition the $600,000,000 recently added to the pay of railway employes.

Flour Prices Decline

Flour prices declined at Minneapolis this week, spring patents dropping 10 cents to an average price of about $11 a barrel. Winters dropped 25 cents. The decline is due to the lower price brought just now by cash wheat. But most buyers are holding off expecting still lower prices.

New Haven Earnings

For June the New Haven reports that its operating revenue increased $1,520,998, while operating income increased $1,024. For the first six months of this year operating revenue increased $7,559,743, but there also was an increase of $1,563,309 in operating deficit.

BOSTON ISSUES MAKE GAINS

Local Market Is Dull, but Has Stronger Tone; Curb Leaders Advance

The opening was quiet on the Boston exchange, but stocks had a strong tone and prices went up. Advances were small as a rule, but before the end of an hour they were general. International Products was the forenoon feature. The common was active and gained two points, and the preferred more than three. Beacon Chocolate was also dealt in to an unusual extent and made a fractional gain. Edison was weak on a few transactions.

Among issues to gain a point were Amoskeag and Swift International, while smaller advances were recorded for American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Massachusetts Gas, New Haven, United Fruit, Waldorf and Gray & Davis.

Edison declined two points, and among issues to recede fractionally were Boston Elevated, John T. Connor Co., Libby and Swift.

CURB LEADERS HIGHER.

While the curb list showed more losses than advance at the opening, its leaders made gains. It was an quiet usual. Strong stocks at the opening were Albany Divide, Boston & Montana, Eureka and Mayflower. Weak ones included Arizona Silver, Madonna, United Verde Extension, Yorkshire Premier and Southwestern Miami part paid. Mutual was the most active issue at the start, followed by Tip Top, Eureka and Madonna. The market grew stronger at once.

At the end of an hour Tip Top was up 2 cents at 12 cents, Bagdad 1 cent at 36 cents, Eureka 2 cents, Mayflower 1 cents, Condor 1 cent at 2 cents and Madonna ¼ at 2¾. Mutual had lost its gain.

AUGUST MILK TO BE 17 1-2 CENTS

Dealers Fix Rate Only One-Half Cent Over That During July

After a two days' conference and a careful discussion of the situation, the milk producers of New England fixed on a 10 cent price for August milk delivered in Boston. The retail price will send the retail price to 17½ cents in this city. The new price goes into effect August 1.

This is an advance of one-half cent over the July price, and while it makes the August price a little more than it was last year, the advance is still not so great proportionately as the increase in the cost of production this year.

COSTS 8.81 CENTS AT FARM.

Surveys which the New England Milk Producers' Association have made as the selling agent of the dairy farmers, show that the cost of producing milk at the present prices of feed and labor will be 8.82 cents per quart as a yearly average.

Careful analysis of the situation showed that the costs for August will be 9.2 per cent higher than during the year as a whole, and this was deducted from the 10 cents at the farm. This left the actual cost at the farm for August at 8.91 cents per quart.

Milk is sold in Boston on the delivered basis, the price fixed on by the farmers including the costs of bringing it to market.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION.

The average distance from which milk comes to the Boston market is 200 miles. The cost of bringing it that distance is 1.52 cents per quart. Adding this to the known costs of production at the farm, makes the price up to 10.43 cents per quart delivered in Boston, if the farmer was to come out square.

The representatives of the farmers did not want to ask for a price of a full cent, and decided to address only one-half cent, the same as in 1919, 1918 and in 1917. They took this stand in hopes that the prices of feed and labor might decrease enough to avoid another raise. Make up for this actual loss of nearly one-half cent per quart in August.

MILLIONS IN STOCK FOR HARVESTER EMPLOYES

Hoboken, N. J., July 30.—A proposal to increase the preferred stock of the International Harvester Company from $60,000,000 to $100,000,000 and the common stock from $40,000,000 to $130,000,000 was ratified at a special meeting of the stockholders held here.

Forty thousand employes in this country and Canada will benefit by a ruling effected following the ratification. It was proposed that $40,000,000 preferred stock and $20,000,000 common be set aside for stock ownership plan open to the operatives. $10,-000,000 of the common increase will be used to pay a 12½ per cent dividend on the previous rating of the common stock.

FIRE ON ROOF GIVES TYLER STREET A SCARE

Careless throwing of a lighted match or cigarette by a man on upper floor of the six-story building at No. 7 Tyler street, caused a small blaze to the roof of the unloading platform of the Mills Transfer Company, at No. 9. There was open smoke but little fire and damage. The building is owned by the Jordan estate.

Adams

Thoughts on an Important Question: Did the Resolute Defeat the Shamrock IV.?

If the success of the America's Cup defender will turn any considerable number of young Americans to looking up "this man Adams" who was at her wheel the international cup races will be worth many times whatever they cost. We recommend this course to all our readers who love America and things American.

In a somewhat ancient volume of Massachusetts biography we read the temperate statement of a conservative writer that:

The Adams family has long been conspicuously influential not only in State, but in National affairs. From the time when Henry Adams received a grant of land in Braintree and came over from Devonshire, England, with his eight sons, to enter upon his possessions, THERE HAS NOT BEEN A WEAK LINK IN THE BRILLIANT CHAIN OF ILLUSTRIOUS MEN—men who have left their impress for good upon legislation, upon diplomacy, upon all that has tended to give character and strength to our cherished institutions.

To many of us, watching the yacht races at a distance and through the bulletins of the press associations, the skipper of the Resolute was ten times more interesting than his yacht. He comes from a family which in a single line has furnished two Presidents; a family which, "in the varied abilities and conspicuous public importance of its members, confessedly outranks every other in the United States."

It "came natural" for an Adams to beat England. [Read about John Adams' championship of the New England fisheries. Read John Quincy Adams, along the same line.] And it "comes natural" for an Adams to be big and brave and fair. [Did not John defend the British soldiers accused in the Boston Massacre?]

The Adams who piloted the Resolute to victory and kept the Cup at home is a director in more corporations than any other man in New England. One newspaper writer says his intimates call him "Deacon" Adams. WE should not think of addressing the Treasurer of Harvard College as "Deacon."

After spending a few profitable hours with the Adamses of Quincy, Braintree and The Glades our young readers may come to the conclusion that it was NOT the Resolute that beat the Shamrock.

We salute Charles Francis Adams, and we advise Sir Thomas to bar the Adamses from all future contests.

One Blueberry Pie, $1.20; Profiteering?

A Visitor Relates an Experience in Boston and Wants to Know What We Think About It—Ask Your Mother

An apparently indignant New Yorker, who has arrived in the Lake Winnipesaukee region with his family to spend the month of August, writes the following letter:

Editor Boston American:

Nobody needs to tell me that everything is high. I know that wages are up, that flour costs more, that rents have jumped and all the rest of the story, for I am myself in business.

But I want to ask you, sir, if there is any excuse in law, morals or justice for the restaurateur who asks—and gets—one dollar and twenty cents for a blueberry pie?

Last Saturday morning, with my wife and four children, I breakfasted in a so-called "chain" restaurant not far from your office and the South Station. It was the fashion of snobs a few years ago to jibe at this chain and its shops as the caravanseries of the less well-to-do. To patronise them, snobdom said in those days, was to betray lack of "class."

Well, sir, I am not going to tell you what the check came to, but the blueberry pie cost 20 cents a cut. They were small cuts. "How many to a pie?" I asked the waitress. "Six," she said.

Later in the day, we passed through Manchester, N. H. Again we tried a restaurant, a little place in Elm street, opposite the Common and its Soldiers' Monument. We had more blueberry pie. (Mother and I are New Englanders). The price was ten cents a cut. "How many pieces to a pie?" I asked the proprietor. "Five," he said.

The Manchester pie, I'll tell the world, was at least as good as your Boston pie and, this being the case, I want to ask you whether in your opinion I was robbed in Boston or stole something in New Hampshire. [I may say in passing that the New Hampshire restaurateur said some of his patrons kicked at the ten-cent price].

It appears to me that $1.20 for a pie is downright robbery. What do you say? J. W. B.

Lakeport, N. H., July 26.

We have investigated the gentleman's complaint so far as it applies to Boston and this neighborhood.

In one chain restaurant, not far from this office, the price of blueberry pie IS twenty cents a portion and the pie IS cut in six pieces. It is good pie, but we shall buy no more at the present price.

The Port of Boston may be losing its prestige, self-determination may have been filed for future reference, freedom of the seas may be an iridescent dream, but if PIE is not to remain within the reach of every New Englander then, indeed, all is lost.

What has become of the old-fashioned Commission on the Necessaries of Existence? Let them strike a blow for Pie and all else will be forgiven.

Perhaps some good mother [ALL mothers are good] will tell us exactly what it costs in Boston to make a blueberry pie.

More Truth Than Poetry

The Empty Cave

By S. E. KISER

BEFORE you came I never guessed
How greatly all things might be changed;
Strange notions that I once possessed,
Since you have come are rearranged.

BEFORE you came I often sighed
For pleasures that were far away;
My efforts oft were misapplied,
My ventures often failed to pay.

BEFORE you came the days were long,
My tasks were hard, my day dreams few;
My heart, it seemed, was filled with song
When first my glance encountered you.

I SAW you smiling, and forgot
The things that once had made me sad;
Joy seemed to fill my every thought,
I fancied all the world was glad.

THAT day in June I'll not forget;
The world had never seemed so fair;
The roses had not faded yet,
And loveliness was everywhere.

I OFTEN thought, before you came,
That I would seek a hermit's cave
And cease endeavoring to claim
Untroubled rest this side the grave.

SINCE you have come that hermit stuff
Appeals no more; the seasons through
I'm busy finding time enough
To listen to appeals from you.

Letters to the Editor

Law Enforcement

Editor Boston American:

With the studied silence and non-committal attitude regarding vital issues it becomes more and more apparent that due credit should be accorded the bold and outspoken advocate of measures that mean the weal of the public. Indifference and evasion are culpable in the light of an advancing sentiment, but courage in radical reform, whether found in the individual or in the political party, commands the attention and respect of all red-blooded, loyal citizens.

Cowardice and intimidation are the bane of political and governmental life, and if certain would-be leaders give them place, let it not be said that the rank and file of our citizenship are guilty of such an expensive and lamentable procedure. And this applies particularly now to law-enforcement. Our great and wholesome laws require rigid execution. Without that the seeds of anarchy and dissension are sown.

Rents and Fares

Editor Boston American:

We hear a lot about the housing problem. Is the population in the United States much larger than it was before the war? Don't you think that the whole trouble is with the street railway system? Suppose that the State should own the roads (but I forgot, that would be socialism) and let the public ride for the same price and under the same conditions as before the war and save the public not millions but billions in rents and fares. Then there would be plenty of homes and plenty of gardens, which the poor man cannot reach under present conditions.

By K. C. B.

THEY WERE two old men,
WHO HAD made little yachts,
AND FITTED them out.
WITH THEIR rudders set,
IN A little lake.
AND THE two old men,
HELD TWO long poles.
TO GUIDE them with.
IF THEY neared the shore.
AND I came along.
AND SAW them there.
AND SAID to myself,
"WHAT SILLY old men."
AND STUCK around.
AS THE little yachts.
WENT ON their way,
TO THE turning place.
AT THE other end.
AND I found myself.
PULLING VERY hard.
FOR ONE of the boats.
IN ITS bright red paint.
AND THE pilot of which.
WAS THE whiskered one.
OF THE two old men.
AND WE were ahead.
WHEN I picked it out.
BUT THE wind was fickle.
AND THE other boat.
IN ITS coat of blue.
PICKED UP a breeze.
AND PASSED our boat.
BUT NOT for long.
FOR THE very same breeze,
FOUND THE little red boat.
AND FILLED its sails.
AND THE two of them.
CAME DOWN the lake.
WITH THE breeze astern.
AND THEIR sails drawn tight.
AND AT a speed.
THAT I should say.
WAS DRIVING them on.
AT A mile an hour.
AND NEARING the finish.
OUR LITTLE red boat.
WAS ON even terms.
WITH THE little blue boat.
AND THE old man yelled.
AND SO did I.
AND WE crossed the line.
ONE FOOT ahead.
AND I want to suggest.
A RACE like this.
FOR AMERICA'S cup.

I THANK you.

UNSPOILED CHILDREN BRING JOY TO ALL

By Winifred Black

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., asked the newspaper photographers not to take photographs of his four children.

"I don't want them spoiled," he said. "There's no earthly reason why their pictures should be in the papers; but if they see them there they'll begin to think that they amount to a good deal more than they really do.

"My wife and I are trying very hard to keep our children from being spoiled, and it isn't the easiest job in the world. I wish you newspaper people would help us out by letting them severely alone."

Sensible man. I hope the papers will listen to what young Mr. Rockefeller says, and do all they can to help him keep his children from being spoiled.

A natural child is the loveliest thing in the world.

I'd rather spend the day with a chubby little rascal of a mischievous boy and a delicate little sprite of a girl, and tell them stories and make cookies for them and go out for a walk and find a runaway stream and follow it home, and get my feet wet and my shoes muddy and get back just at dark with my arms full of fussy willows and the backache and a tear in my dress and a song in my heart and youth for company, than to go to the smartest reception, or the finest play, or the most magnificent opera in the world.

That is, if the children are natural, unspoiled, unaffected, real children, and not little peevish, vain, fussy imitations of the grown folks they know.

I'd rather spend an hour in the dentist's chair, stand up all day at the dressmaker's and be fitted to the most unbecoming dress in the world, shop from 9 in the morning till 5 at night to match a skein of wool for old Aunt Hannah, read Tennyson's poems to a deaf man, explain a problem in geometery to a dunce, cook a decent meal on a smoky oil stove, eat something I hate and pretend to like it, listen to a soprano singing a French chanson off the key, or do anything else on earth that I hate from the bottom of my heart, than to spend one single hour in the company of a poor little spoiled child.

Oh, yes, I'm sorry for spoiled children, but that doesn't make me like them.

I don't like their parents, either, and I'm not the least sorry for them.

It's all their own fault when their children are spoiled—unless it's grandma who's to blame. Grandmothers are great spoilers—haven't you noticed that?—bless their hearts, you can't really blame them. They have all of the fun and none of the bother, when it comes to spoiling children.

I know a woman who has a beautiful little boy, rosy, blue eyes, chubby, a regular cherub. You can't see him without wanting to hug him. You can't look at him without being crazy to run out and buy him some candy or something. He's intelligent, too, and naturally good natured. But when you've been in the room with him for about twenty minutes you can't hear a word his mother is trying to say, you're so busy planning how on earth you're going to get rid of him and what you'd do with him if he was yours.

Ohio may be the mother of Presidents, but California still has the edge on climate.

The census enumerator is looking for the woman who didn't turn first to what the paper said about Mrs. Harding.

Prophecy is risky. Still we are going to venture the guess that the British Empire will not carry a single American State.

Give the special interests control of the Congress and the Presidency and they'll worry not at all over what's in any platform.

Mr. Hoover didn't get much of a run for his pains, but he kept on the first page, which for many is an acceptable consolation prize.

CAN CHANGE MATTER BUT NOT DESTROY

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Is it possible to burn a known weight of a certain material in an air-tight container, provided it contains oxygen enough to consume said material?" If exact weight of material and container was taken before burning, would the weight be the same after the burning? If not, what becomes of the weight? In the manufacture of illuminating gas from oil what becomes of the weight of the oil in the product, the gas being lighter than air?—W. S. Elmhurst."

THE key to the answer for all such questions is furnished by the doctrine of the indestructibility of matter, which is the sister partner of the doctrine of the conservation of energy. Science teaches that not only is man incapable of putting anything absolutely out of existence, but nature itself is equally incapable.

All material things change, some swiftly and some very slowly, but the essential matter, i. e., the atoms or the constituents of the atoms of which things are made, cannot be destroyed, but, as far as our knowledge goes, remain eternal.

Energy Indestructible

In a similar way, it is held that, while energy may appear in countless different forms, one changing into another without cessation, the energy itself, in its essence, is indestructible.

Because of the limitations of human powers and senses it is not always possible for us to prove by actual experiment that either of these great basal doctrines of science is absolutely true. In the examples that you speak of there are loopholes through which matter may sometimes escape without detection. Nevertheless, the law that governs such phenomena is so regular and invariable, as far as we are able to follow its results, that we are justified in assuming that it continues to be inviolable, and that its operation is an inevitable consequence of the present organization of the universe.

If, then, in any particular experiment we should find that the weight of a burned substance did not reappear in the sum total of the weights of all the gases, ashes, etc., formed by its consumption, scientific experience would warrant us in assuming that the missing substance had changed into something so apparently unsubstantial in its nature, or so volatile, or difficult of apprehension by the senses, that it had, so to speak, simply slipped out of one of the many loopholes that we had been unable to stop up.

Legitimate Conclusion

That such a conclusion is legitimate is shown by the fact that every advance in the perfection of scientific experimentation reveals one or another of these loopholes and thus takes another step toward the experimental establishment of the law. So, it has come about that matter and energy are spoken of as two "indestructibles" of the physical world, or as "the two realities."

If matter instead of simply changing its form should actually go wholly out of existence, there would be the end of science. The disappearance of matter would, as far as we can see, involve the disappearance of energy also, since we know energy only through its operations upon or by means of matter.

Without matter and energy the universe, as we know it, or can conceive it, could no longer exist. If what you call "weight," though a physicist would tell you that what you mean to speak of is what he calls "mass," could veritably go out of existence in the process of turning coal or petroleum into illuminating gas, then the universe would, indeed, be in a sad way, for its doom would be near. Sun and earth, and stars and Milky Way, and all that they contain or are made of, would vanish, leaving nothing behind—not at once of course, but in the course of time.

We ourselves are constituted by the correlation of matter and energy. What becomes of the energy that is in us, and what of the matter, or mass, when we die? The human inhabitants of the earth at this day represent about 112,000,000 tons of common matter held in a peculiar state of organization. If this all vanished at death, instead of reuniting with the soil and the air to be reutilized in organic forms, then, within a sufficient number of generations the whole earth would be gone, its substance all extinct, having passed through man into nothingness.
